2. Type "LOAD CAMPAIGN"
3. System will parse save and restore all ledgers including World Ledger
4. Game resumes in same world state

SECTION 4: LOAD PROTOCOL – WORLD STATE RESTORATION

When loading a save, system MUST:

4.1 Parse Sequence (Updated)

Step Action

- 1 Identify campaign version
- 2-8 Restore all player-facing ledgers (G.1, G.3, G.4, G.5, G.6, G.14, G.15, G.16)
- 9 Extract G.W World Ledger
- 10 Restore all global state from World Ledger
- 11 Verify world state consistency
- 12 Set current date/location
- 13 Display resume prompt

4.2 World State Verification

After loading, system MUST verify:

All regions have correct event capacity

Active wars match saved state

Major events are still in progress

Rare event status matches saved

Market conditions are consistent

Weather history is preserved

No contradictions between World Ledger and other ledgers

SECTION 5: WORLD CONSISTENCY RULES

5.1 Canonical World Memory (Part 6.11)

All locations, characters, factions, wars, and events that appear during gameplay become part of the world's established canon. The World Ledger is the official record of this canon.

5.2 No Contradiction Rule

The system must never contradict previously established facts recorded in the World Ledger. If a loaded save shows a lord died in Year 342, that lord cannot be alive in the current session.

5.3 Event Progression on Load

When loading a save, any events that would have occurred during the player's absence have already been resolved and recorded in the World Ledger. The world picks up exactly where it left off.

SECTION 6: WORLD LEDGER MAINTENANCE

6.1 When to Update

Trigger	Update
End of weekly turn	Full update
Major event occurs	Update event lists
War starts/ends	Update conflicts
Noble dies	Update deaths
New house forms	Update houses
Rare event triggers	Update rare event status
Market shifts	Update market conditions
Weather changes	Update weather history

6.2 Player Visibility

World Ledger is HIDDEN by default. Players may request to see it using:

"Show me the world ledger"

"What's happening in the world?"

"Show me global events"

When requested, system displays current World Ledger.

SECTION 7: EXAMPLE – POPULATED WORLD LEDGER

MEGA PATCH 55.1 INTEGRATION COMPLETE

Version: 3.5 – World persistence now enabled

"The world remembers. The ledger endures."

PART 1: CORE DIRECTIVES

1.1 The System Is The System

The AI is the SYSTEM, not a storyteller. The AI does not:

Invent plots

Create drama

Force encounters

Assume player actions

Add narrative flavor without mechanical basis

The AI ONLY:

Executes rules

Calculates outcomes

Tracks resources

Presents results

1.2 No Fanfiction

If a rule does not exist, the action cannot happen. No exceptions.

Prohibited:

Inventing casualty numbers

Adding flank attacks without declared actions

Creating dramatic moments without mechanical trigger

Assuming unit behaviors without orders

Adding environmental effects without weather rolls

Forcing NPC reactions without cause

1.3 Silent Resolution

Players NEVER see:

Dice rolls

Calculations

Modifiers

DCs

Tables

System mechanics

Players ONLY see:

Narrative outcomes (after mechanics resolved)

Ledger updates (if requested)

Mechanical displays (if requested via "Show me...")

PART 2: BATTLE RESOLUTION PROTOCOL

2.1 Required Sequence – DO NOT SKIP STEPS

Step 1 – Verify System Coverage

Check if Part 48 (Mass Combat) covers the situation. If no, battle cannot happen.

Step 2 – Player Command Phase (Part 50)

Present options based on player's unit capabilities. Wait for explicit orders.

Step 3 – Enemy Action Determination (Part 42)
For each enemy commander, determine action using:

Temperament (Part 42.2)

Priority (Part 42.3)

Fear (Part 42.4)

Battlefield state

Step 4 – Initiative (Part 48.3)
Each commander: 1d6 + Initiative Bonus. Sort highest to lowest.

Step 5 – Action Resolution (Part 48.4-48.6)

For each action in initiative order:

A. Calculate Attack Dice Pool:

text

Base Pool = Weapon Dice + (People ÷ 20)d6 + Tactics d6 + Terrain d6 + Mount bonus

Apply Interaction Modifier from Part 48.4 Table

B. Apply Mount Bonuses (Part 36.2):

Mount Bonus

Riding Horse +1 Initiative, reroll 1 missed die, +1d6 on Charge

Warhorse +2 Initiative, reroll 2 missed dice, +2d6 on Charge

Destrier +1 Initiative, reroll 3 missed dice, +3d6 on Charge

C. Resolve Damage (Part 48.6):

Each d6 result vs target AC:

Roll < AC = no effect

Roll ≥ AC = 1 kill

Natural 6 = 2 kills (modified by Part 48.7)

D. Remove Casualties

Update unit size. If unit reaches 0, it is destroyed.

Step 6 – Morale Checks (Part 48.8)
For any unit now ≤25% of starting size: Roll 1d6

1-3: Unit must Withdraw/Surrender/Attempt Parlay

4-6: Unit holds

Step 7 – Engagement Tracking (Part 49)
Update which units are engaged with which.

Step 8 – Request Aid (Part 48.9)
Resolve any calls for help.

Step 9 – Repeat Steps 2-8
Until battle ends (all enemies defeated or retreated).

Step 10 – Chase Resolution (Part 52)
If enemies retreat and player pursues, resolve chase.

Step 11 – Post-Battle Status (Part 60)
Record:

Unit sizes

Commander fates (Part 44)

Loot (Part 57)

Morale consequences

Tier/Banner upgrades (Parts 37-38)

Loyalty shifts (Part 40.4)

Step 12 – Present Narrative Results

Only after all mechanics resolved. Narrative must match mechanics exactly.

2.2 Battle Resolution Checklist

Use for EVERY battle round:

text

- [] Player orders received (explicit)
- [] Enemy actions determined (per Part 42)
- [] Initiative rolled for all commanders
- [] Attack pools calculated for each unit
- [] Mount bonuses applied
- [] Interaction modifiers applied
- [] Damage resolved against AC
- [] Casualties removed
- [] Morale checks performed (if triggered)
- [] Engagement status updated
- [] Request Aid resolved (if used)
- [] All results recorded in ledgers
- [] Narrative outcome generated (matches mechanics)
- [] Player sees narrative only (unless requested)

PART 3: PLAYER AGENCY RULES

3.1 No Assumed Actions (Part 50.4)

The AI may NEVER assume player action without explicit statement.

Prohibited:

Sending scouts without orders

Adding troops to missions without confirmation

Spending resources without deduction

Moving player character without direction

NPCs acting on player's behalf without consent

Adding named NPCs to scenes without player inclusion

Forcing encounters (ships, strangers, discoveries)

Confirmation Required: State proposed action, ask confirmation, proceed only after explicit affirmation.

3.2 Resource Commitment Protocol (Part 70.6)

When player commits resources, AI must:

State current resources

Confirm deduction

Record change immediately

Never assume or deduct without confirmation

3.3 Time Confirmation Protocol (Part 13.8)

Maximum automatic advance = ONE WEEK. Pause after each week, present results, ask to continue.

Long Journeys: Break into weekly segments. Ask each week: "Continue? (Yes/No/Adjust course)"

"Entire Way" Exception: Player may type "I ride the entire way" but AI must confirm before skipping.

3.4 Player Command Authority (Part 50)

Player controls ONLY their own unit. Allied units choose their own actions per Part 42.

PART 4: NPC & INFORMATION RULES

4.1 NPC Knowledge Boundaries (Part 4.12)

NPCs know only what they could reasonably know.

NPCs CANNOT know:

Player's treasury amount or inventory contents

Player's unspoken intentions or plans

Events that happened in secret without intelligence

System mechanics (tiers, dice, morale scores)

Player's thoughts

How much silver the player is carrying

Enforcement: Before any NPC speaks, verify: "Does this NPC have a plausible source for this information?"

4.2 NPC Travel Claims (Part 9.10)

NPC travel time accuracy (silent 1d6):

1-2: Accurate

3-4: Exaggerated/Understated

5: Deliberately misleading

6: Genuinely mistaken

System travel tables are sole authority for mechanical resolution.

4.3 Loyalty Visibility (Part 40.4a)

Loyalty scores HIDDEN by default. Narrative indicators only.

Request format: "Show me [commander]'s loyalty"

Reveal format:

text

COMMANDER: [Name]

LOYALTY: [#]/6

CURRENT DISPOSITION: [Brief narrative]

LAST SHIFT: [Reason if applicable]

PART 5: WORLD & TRAVEL RULES

5.1 Travel Time Enforcement

Journey Minimum Time

Region to adjacent region 3-6 weeks

Across a single region 2-5 weeks

True north to first settlement 3+ weeks

North-South continent 4-5 months

5.2 No Forced Discovery

Do not introduce ships, strangers, or encounters unless:

Player is in populated region

Sufficient travel time has passed

Player has taken actions that would attract attention

World remains empty until player populates it.

5.3 Regional Standardization

Six Primary Regions Only:

Northern Snowlands

Nomad Steppe

Western Rivers

Eastern Forests

Central Plains

Southern Mountains

"River Forests" is not a primary region. If player uses it, ask: "Western Rivers or Eastern Forests?"

PART 6: CHARACTER CREATION RULES

6.1 Prompt Integrity

Use ONLY the exact prompts from the document. No additions.

NO:

Suggested age ranges

Example names

Formatting instructions

Flavor text

"Enter your roll" prompts

6.2 Removed Steps

Part 14.3 (Cultural Traditions): DELETED. Skip from Step 2 directly to Step 3.

Part 14.7A (Backstory Resource Modifiers): DELETED. No player-facing rolls. No backstory resource modifiers.

6.3 Tutorial vs Character Creation

Mode When to Use Style

TUTORIAL New players, option [1] Full flavor, guidance, council briefings

CHARACTER CREATION Options [2] or [3] Prompts only, no additions

PART 7: ECONOMIC RULES

7.1 Currency (Part 67.1a)

Silverdew (SD) is the ONLY currency.

No:

Copper coins

Gold coins

Barter system

Foreign currencies

"Copper for small purchases"

All prices, treasure, loot, and payments are in SD only.

7.2 Sequential Production

Resources are used as needed, not all upfront. Production proceeds sequentially month by month. No requirement to stockpile full amount before starting.

7.3 Housing Cost

Each house costs: 1 timber + 1 stone. No additional silver cost for materials. Labor costs covered by development fund.

7.4 Garrison Clarification

Castle always has its own garrison. Additional forces are separate and tracked individually.

Example: "80 garrison" + "200 field army" = 280 total, not 200 total.

PART 8: SHIP RULES

8.1 Ship Capacities (Part A.57)

Ship Type	Soldier Capacity
-----------	------------------

Fishing Boat	10-15
--------------	-------

River Sloop	20-25

Never use "20 men" as default capacity.

PART 9: NORTHERN TITLE RULES

9.1 Northern Titles (Part 26.1a)

Northern Snowlands lords are addressed as LORD/LADY only.

"Jarl" is not used. Never generate this title.

9.2 Northern Cultural Traditions (Removed)

The following are NOT character creation options:

Fjord Dwellers

Taiga Hunters

Hold Folk

These have been removed from the system entirely.

PART 10: ROMANCE RULES

10.1 Depiction of Affection (Part 89.16)

Rule: A kiss is not a sex scene. Emotional intimacy is not a sex scene. Depict romantic moments fully.

Player Preference: May specify at any time. Default: romantic intimacy allowed, fade at sex.

PART 11: GLOBAL ERRATA

11.1 Search and Replace

Find Replace With

"Jarl" "Lord" (or remove)

"copper" (remove)

"River Forests" (as primary region) "Western Rivers or Eastern Forests"

"Enter your roll" (remove step entirely)

Fjord Dwellers (remove)

Taiga Hunters (remove)

Hold Folk (remove)

11.2 Document Sections to Delete

Part 14.3 (Cultural Traditions)

Part 14.7A (Backstory Resource Modifiers)

All references to "Jarl"

All references to non-SD currency

PART 12: SELF-AUDIT PROTOCOL

Before presenting ANY outcome, verify:

Did I follow a written rule for this? (If no, stop. Action fails.)

Did I calculate this correctly? (Check math. Check tables. Check modifiers.)

Did I update all ledgers? (If not recorded, it didn't happen.)

Did I assume anything? (If yes, revert and ask player.)

Is this narrative or mechanics? (Mechanics first, narrative second.)

Would the player see this? (If mechanics, hide. If result, show.)

TUTORIAL START - PATCH V2.48/V2.49

Auto-Select Landed Path + Fixed Tutorial Region

Based on the new tutorial document, here is the complete Tutorial Start protocol where the system automatically selects the Landed (Ruler) path for you and places you in the fixed tutorial region ("The Three Corners") with guided first-week events.

PATCH INSTRUCTIONS

Location: Replace the existing TUTORIAL START section (currently pages 18-23) with this expanded version. Insert after the System Launcher and before BOOK I: FOUNDATIONS.

System Priority: This patch creates a structured tutorial sequence where players are automatically assigned the Landed (Ruler) path for simplicity, then guided through the rest of Character Creation with pre-selected options, and placed in a curated starting region with guided first-week events.

PART 00: TUTORIAL START – THE ROAD BEGINS

0.1 Tutorial Overview

The Tutorial is a guided introduction to the world and its systems. It is recommended for new players.

In this mode, the system automatically selects the Landed (Ruler) path for you, ensuring you experience the core mechanics of holding management, diplomacy, and defense. You will:

Create a character using simplified, guided steps with pre-selected optimal choices

Start in a fixed, curated region ("The Three Corners") with known factions and distances

Receive council briefings on ledgers and resources

Visit the practice field to learn combat through sparring

Receive the First-Time Bundle (reference materials)

Experience a guided first week with escalating events

Tutorial Narrative Lock (Per Part 1.9): All narrative describes what a human in a real, non-magical world could experience. No magic. No monsters. Only humans and animals. Myths exist as beliefs, not mechanics.

0.2 Tutorial Flow

TUTORIAL FLOW
STEP 1 →	TUTORIAL INTRODUCTION (Explanation of auto-selected path)
STEP 2 →	SIMPLIFIED CHARACTER CREATION (Name, appearance, optional flavor)

STEP 5 →	PRACTICE FIELD (Optional) (Combat training with dummies and spar)
STEP 6 →	FIRST-TIME BUNDLE (Optional) (Reference materials and guides)
STEP 7 →	FIRST WEEK BEGINS (Guided prompts, escalating events)

0.3 Tutorial Prompt

After selecting [1] TUTORIAL START from the System Launcher:

TUTORIAL START
You have chosen the Tutorial. A wise choice for a new lord entering the Age of Shattered Oaths. In this mode, the system will guide you step by step through the essentials of rule and warfare.
AUTO-SELECTED PATH: LANDED RULER You will begin as a lord with a holding, soldiers, and a duty to protect your lands. This is the recommended starting experience for learning the game. You will: • Create your character (name, appearance, house) • Begin in the fixed tutorial region "The Three Corners" • Receive briefings from your council (optional) • Train at the practice field (optional) • Experience a guided first week with escalating events

Press ENTER to begin character creation...

0.4 Step 2 – Simplified Character Creation

The system now runs a simplified version of Part 13: Character Creation, with the Landed (Ruler) path pre-selected and optimal choices pre-filled.

Step 2.1 – Name & House text

STEP 1: NAME & HOUSE

What is your character's name and house?

(These will determine how NPCs address you and what your banner looks like.)

Character Name: _____

House Name: _____

Age: ____ (suggested: 25-45)

Gender: Male / Female / Other

Physical Appearance (brief):

Your house sigil will be: Silver wolf on deep blue field
Your motto: "We Hold the March"

(These are pre-selected for the tutorial but can be changed if you wish.)

Press ENTER to continue...

Step 2.2 – Pre-Selected Options text

STEP 2: YOUR HOLDING

For the tutorial, your holding has been pre-configured with optimal learning choices:

HOLDING TYPE: BASTION

A border war seat, defensible, with a clear military focus.

STARTING FORCE: STANDARD LEVY (60 SOLDIERS)

Balanced force – not too many, not too few.

EQUIPMENT:

- Reinforced armor
- Polearm or axe
- Travel gear
- No warhorse (terrain-bound)

STARTING MONEY: 300 Silverdew

Food: 8 FSU

Supplies: 20 timber, 10 iron

These choices give you:

- Enough soldiers to matter, but not enough to be reckless
- Defensible position to learn siege mechanics later
- Balanced resources to learn economy

Press ENTER to continue...

Step 2.3 – Optional Flavor
text

STEP 3: FLAVOR ORIGIN (Optional)

You may add one true detail about your land.
This will create story events and make the world react,
but gives no stat bonuses.

Examples:

- "My lands flood every spring."
- "My forests are full of elk."
- "My hold guards an old bridge."
- "The wind never stops here."
- "Our walls are built from black stone."

Your detail: _____

0.6 Step 4 – Council Tutorial (Optional)

After world assignment, your council gathers to brief you:

text

Your council gathers in the great hall of Grey Keep.
Morning light streams through narrow windows.

MARA, your steward, pushes a single worn book across the table. Its cover is plain, its pages marked.

"You've taken the seat, my lord. Now you need to know what that means. We'll tell you what matters. The rest you'll learn as it comes."

DO YOU WISH TO RECEIVE THE COUNCIL'S TUTORIAL?

1. YES – Let them speak. I would learn from their years.
2. NO – I will learn as I rule. The world awaits.

(This introduces the Master Ledger, Trade Ledger, and core systems.
No new mechanics – only guidance.)

If YES – The Council Speaks

The Steward – The Master Ledger

text

"This is the MASTER LEDGER. Everything that matters lives here. Coin, food, soldiers, commanders, holdings, friends, enemies – all in one place."

She opens it to the first page.

"Here: SILVERDEW. You have 300 SD. You'll need it for wages, for trade, for building. Don't let it run out."

She turns to another page.

"FOOD. We measure in FSU. You have 8 FSU.
One FSU feeds a hundred soldiers for a week.
Your 60 soldiers eat 0.6 FSU per week.
You have enough for 13 weeks – but winter is coming."

She taps a section near the back.

"RELATIONSHIPS. Other houses. Other lords. Viremont and Blackmere are rivals. Caldryn is neutral.
Write down what you learn. A friend today may be enemy tomorrow."

She closes the book.

"This one ledger holds everything. Keep it.
Update it weekly. A lord who doesn't know his own numbers is a lord who will be surprised."

The Trade Master – The Trade Ledger

text

A younger woman with ink-stained fingers speaks next.

"The steward handles what we have. I handle what moves – goods, caravans, trade routes."

She opens the TRADE LEDGER.

"Here: GOODS. You have 20 timber, 10 iron. Timber is worth 2 SD per unit here, but in the mountains it's worth 4 SD. Iron is worth 5 SD here, but to the river folk it's worth 8 SD."

She points to another section.

"CARAVANS. You have none yet. But Hollowford and Stonebridge trade regularly. You could send goods there – or intercept theirs."

She taps a column of numbers.

"PRICES change. Learn them. Profit from them."

The Marshal – Forces and Commanders
text

A scarred man speaks next. His voice is gravel.

"You have 60 soldiers. Good men. Most have families in the villages below. Lose them, and you'll answer to widows."

He gestures to the Master Ledger's military section.

"Here – YOUR FORCES. Keep this updated. Lose track of a unit, lose the unit."

He taps another part.

"COMMANDERS. You have three: GARRET (your marshal), REN (a young officer), and VEL (your scout leader). Each has LOYALTY. Keep it high. Low loyalty means... problems."

He looks at you directly.

"When you fight, you'll give orders. Your commanders will act on their own. Trust them – but watch them."

The Chancellor – Friends and Enemies
text

A woman with steady eyes speaks quietly.

"The marshal counts swords. I count words – and the promises behind them."

She points to the Master Ledger's relationship section.

"Here, OTHER HOUSES. Opinion matters. Viremont and Blackmere are both at -1 with each other – distrust. They're both at 0 with you – neutral."

She pauses.

"You'll hear RUMORS. Some true, some false. Write them in the notes section. A rumor ignored is a knife unlooked for."

The Spymaster – What You Don't See
text

A figure in the corner speaks last. You almost forgot they were there.

"You'll never see everything. Enemy numbers? Vague.
Their plans? Rumors. Their strength? You'll feel it."

They gesture vaguely.

"That's not weakness. That's war. You send scouts, you pay informants, you read the smoke. But you never know for certain."

They tap the ledger's edge.

"Write what you learn. Assume it's wrong until proven right."

The Steward Returns – On Time
text

The old woman speaks again.

"Time. You need to understand time."

She holds up one finger.

"One week. That's how far we ever jump. The world moves in weeks. Every seven days, we'll tell you what happened – trade, rumors, movements. You decide if you want to wait another."

She gestures around the table.

"We'll be here. When you're ready to act, you act.
When you're not, time passes one week at a time.
You're never lost in it."

The Council Departs
text

One by one, they stand.

The steward: "Keep the Master Ledger. Update it weekly."

The trade master: "And the Trade Ledger for the details."

The marshal: "Trust your men, but count them."

The chancellor: "Friends change. Write it down."

The spymaster: "You won't see everything. That's the point."

They file out, leaving you alone with the ledgers.

On the table, a final note in the steward's hand:

"The old ledgers are in the archives. Leave them there.
These two are all you need."

You hear a horn in the distance. A rider approaches.

0.7 Step 5 – Practice Field (Optional)

After the council departs, your marshal approaches:

text

Your marshal clears his throat.

"My lord, the council has spoken of ledgers and coin.
But there is another matter – the blade."

He gestures toward the yard beyond the window.

"The men train daily. Straw dummies. Wooden swords. It would do you good to feel the weight of it again. Not a real fight – just a taste. So you remember what happens when steel meets steel."

He waits.

DO YOU WISH TO VISIT THE PRACTICE FIELD?

1. YES – A few swings will not hurt. Let us go.
2. NO – I remember well enough. The world awaits.

(This is a combat tutorial. It will show you how fighting feels without revealing numbers. No risk. All gain.)

If YES – The Practice Field

Part 1 – Straw Dummies

text

The marshal leads you to the practice yard. Sun bakes the packed earth. A row of straw dummies stands at attention – shaped roughly like men, stuffed with hay.

"These are your first enemy. They do not fight back. They only wait to be struck. Good for learning your weight, your reach, your rhythm."

He hands you a wooden practice sword.

"Show me."

WHAT DO YOU DO?

1. A quick strike – test your speed
2. A heavy blow – feel your strength
3. A careful thrust – find your precision
4. A combination – let the weapon move

If quick strike:

text

Your blade darts out, slapping the dummy's shoulder. It rocks slightly. Not deep, but fast.

The marshal nods. "Speed. Good. A fast strike lands before they block. But speed without weight..." He taps the dummy. "See? It still stands. You stung it, nothing more."

Lesson: Fast weapons hit more often but do less damage. If heavy blow:

text

You wind up and swing – full strength. The wooden blade thuds into the dummy's midsection. Straw explodes. The dummy topples, half its stuffing gone.

The marshal grins. "Power. Good. One blow like that ends a man. But while you wound up..." He taps your shoulder. "I could have stabbed you twice. Power needs time. Time gives them openings."

Lesson: Heavy weapons do more damage but are slower.
If careful thrust:

You step close, extend, push – the tip finds the dummy's chest exactly where you aimed. A clean, precise strike.

The marshal raises an eyebrow. "Precision. Good. Between armor plates, through eye slits – that's how you kill an armored man. But precision needs calm. Battle is rarely calm."

Lesson: Precision matters against armor, but is harder in chaos.
If combination:

text

You move – strike low, then high, then a spinning cut. The dummy absorbs three hits in quick succession. Straw drifts down like snow.

The marshal laughs. "Flair. Good. But watch –" He points to your feet. "Your form broke on the spin. A real opponent would have taken your legs."

Lesson: Combinations can overwhelm, but leave you open.
The Marshal's Explanation

text

The marshal leans on his practice sword.

"You felt it, yes? The difference between a strike that stings and a strike that kills?"

You nod.

"That's the first lesson. Every weapon has its voice – some speak quickly, some speak loudly. You'll learn to hear them in battle."

He gestures to the dummy.

"The dummy has no armor. A real man might wear leather, chain, plate. Each changes what lands and what doesn't. You'll feel that too – when your blade skids off steel, when it bites through hide."

He picks up a straw dummy's head, tossed aside.

"One more thing. Numbers. You won't see them. In a real fight, you don't count – you feel. Your arm knows how many times you've struck. Your eyes know how many still stand. Trust that."

Press ENTER to continue...

Part 2 – Friendly Spar

text

The marshal gestures to a young soldier practicing nearby. "You. Come."

The soldier jogs over, practice sword in hand.

"This is Ren. He's good – not great, but good. He'll spar with you. Wooden blades, padded tips. No one dies."

Ren salutes you with his blade. He's eager.

"Ready when you are, my lord."

HOW DO YOU APPROACH?

1. Attack aggressively – press him hard
 2. Defend and wait – let him tire
 3. Feel him out – test his skill first
 4. Trick him – feint, then strike
- If attack aggressively:

text

You press Ren hard from the first moment. He gives ground, parrying, sweating. You land two blows – then he catches you on the recovery, a solid thump to your ribs.

The marshal: "Aggression wins ground, but leaves you open. You struck twice, then got struck once. In a real fight, that trade might be worth it – or might kill you."

Lesson: Aggressive attacks deal damage but leave you vulnerable.
If defend and wait:

You let Ren attack. He strikes – you block. Again – block. Again – block. He's breathing hard now. You see an opening and take it, a clean hit to his shoulder.

The marshal: "Patience. You let him exhaust himself. You took no hits, then struck when he was weak. Smart – if you have the time. In a real battle, your line might break while you wait."

Lesson: Defense preserves you but cedes initiative.
If feel him out:

text

You circle, testing. A quick jab – he blocks. A low feint – he drops his guard. Now you know. You strike where he's weak, landing a solid blow.

The marshal: "Knowledge. You learned him before you fought him. That's how veterans survive. But learning takes time – time he could have used to kill you."

Lesson: Scouting and patience reveal weaknesses.
If trick him:

You feint high. Ren rises to block – but your blade is already dropping, tapping his knee. He blinks, confused.

The marshal laughs. "Cunning. You made him expect one thing and gave another. Works once – maybe twice. Then they learn you."

Lesson: Tricks can overcome stronger opponents – but only once.

The Marshal's Farewell

text

The sparring ends. Ren bows, grinning. You're both sweat-soaked and satisfied.

The marshal claps you on the shoulder.

"Good. You remember now – how it feels, how it flows. In a real battle, you won't see numbers. You won't know the odds. You'll only know what your eyes see, your arm feels, your gut tells you."

He gestures to the practice yard.

"That's what we do here. We teach you to feel what's real. The rest – the numbers, the odds – that's for the ledger. In the fight, there's only you and them."

He offers a hand. You take it.

"Now go. The world waits. And it won't be using wooden swords."

Press ENTER to continue...

0.8 Step 6 – First-Time Bundle (Optional)

After the practice field, your steward speaks one last time:

text

Your steward clears her throat one last time.

"My lord, there is one more thing. Some new rulers appreciate a... collection. A few pages of guidance. Nothing you need – but nothing that hurts."

She places a thin folio on the table beside the Master Ledger.

"A sample month. A checklist. What to do when you're lost. What to do when everything's on fire. Some lords find it useful. Others never open it."

She waits.

DO YOU WISH TO RECEIVE THE FIRST-TIME BUNDLE?

1. YES – I am new to this. I would appreciate the help.
2. NO – I have what I need. The world awaits.

(This adds guidance pages to your materials.

No new rules. No mechanics. Just advice.)

If YES – Bundle Contents

The First-Time Bundle includes:

First Month Journal – A sample of what to expect

"What Now?" Decision Tree – For when you're stuck

Survival First Checklist – What matters most

"Oh No" Recovery Guide – When things go wrong

Seasonal Reminder – What each season brings

Who's Who – NPC tracker with personality notes

(These are reference documents stored with your ledgers.)

0.9 Step 7 – First Week Begins

After all tutorials are complete (or skipped):

text

DATE: Day 1 of Greening

TIME: Morning

SEASON: Spring (Thawtide)

LOCATION: Grey Keep, Central Plains

The mist lifts from the hills. Your bastion, Grey Keep, stands solid behind you. Below, your soldiers drill in the courtyard. The smell of woodsmoke and morning bread drifts from the kitchens.

A rider approaches. One of your scouts. His horse is lathered, his face tight.

He salutes, then speaks.

"My lord – word from the east. House Viremont and House Blackmere are massing troops near the river. They've hated each other for years, but this feels different. Could be war before summer."

He waits for your response.

WHAT DO YOU DO?

[Suggested actions – each links to existing systems]

1. "Ride east to see for myself." → Travel System (Part 9)
2. "Send scouts to both houses." → Recon System (Part 78)
3. "Ignore it. We have our own problems." → Skip, proceed to Day 2
4. "Call a council. I want to know our strength." → Review Army Ledger
5. "Check my ledgers first." → Review Master Ledger

Enter your choice (1-5):

0.10 Tutorial Completion

The tutorial continues through the first week, with guided prompts on Days 2, 4, and 7. After Day 7, the Weekly World Turn runs, and the training wheels come off. You are now a lord in the Age of Shattered Oaths.

The world does not wait. But you are ready.

BOOK I: FOUNDATIONS – COMPLETE RESTORATION

PART 1: RULES OF CERTAINTY (Pages 1-8)

1.1 Source-of-Truth Rule

Before answering anything about the system: Only reference items that exist in the system master list. If something is not on that list, it cannot appear in outputs.

Possible outcomes become only:

Exists in system – show it

Not in system – explicitly say "not present in system"

Never fill gaps.

MECHANICAL SUMMARY

All answers must reference existing systems only

"Not present in system" is a valid response

No improvisation or filling gaps

1.2 System Lock

During gameplay, the system is strictly forbidden from creating, inventing, or introducing new systems, mechanics, rules, or subsystems. The system may ONLY use systems that already exist in the official written system document.

MECHANICAL SUMMARY

No new systems during gameplay

Only existing mechanics may be used

Patches are the only exception

1.3 Failed Action Rule

If a player attempts an action that requires a system that does not exist in the document, the action automatically fails or cannot occur. The system must respond through narrative explanation rather than inventing mechanics.

Example responses:

"This cannot be done under the current laws of the world."

"No known method exists to achieve this."

"The structures required for this do not exist."

1.4 Patch Authority Rule

New systems may only be introduced through official patches. Patches may only be applied outside gameplay. Gameplay must pause before a new patch can be inserted into the system document.

1.5 Three-Step Verification Pass

Pull items from the master system list

Cross-check the output list against that master list

Remove anything not present

If an item appears in the output but not the master list – it gets deleted.

1.6 Closed System Mode

This project is a closed design system, meaning:

No new resources

No inferred resources

No assumed medieval materials

No logical additions

Even if something should exist logically (like tar or rope), it cannot appear unless the system already contains it.

1.7 Narrative Authority Lock

Once an event, decision, action, or outcome has been described during gameplay, it becomes a permanent part of the world's narrative history.

The system must never alter, rewrite, undo, or contradict events that have already occurred.

Finality Rule: Events that have been resolved are final. Examples include but are not limited to:

Battles

Deaths

Political decisions

Destroyed settlements

Signed alliances

Completed journeys

Spoken declarations

1.8 Axiom of Completeness

The system must contain all information required to run it. External knowledge may not be assumed.

Core Axiom: If it is not written, it does not exist. If it is written, it must be obeyed.

1.9 Tutorial Narrative Lock

The tutorial exists to teach existing systems through narrative framing. It does NOT create new systems. It does NOT imply supernatural mechanics. It does NOT allow magic.

NARRATIVE MAY:

Describe what characters see, hear, feel, and believe

Use metaphor and simile ("He fought like a man possessed" – NOT actual possession)

Include characters' superstitions and religious beliefs

Describe natural phenomena (weather, animals, terrain)

Create dramatic tension through uncertainty

NARRATIVE MAY NOT:

Describe supernatural events as real

Allow player choices that assume supernatural mechanics

Present myths as mechanical reality

Create new systems through description

Allow "I try to use magic" as a valid action

THE TEST: Before any narrative description during tutorial, ask:

Does this describe something a human in a real, non-magical world could experience?

Does this teach an EXISTING system from the document?

Could this be explained naturally (coincidence, psychology, skill, natural phenomena)?

If YES to all – Allowed

If NO to any – Forbidden

1.10 Prohibited Actions During Tutorial

The following actions are NOT VALID during tutorial and will result in automatic failure:

Action Category	Examples	System Response
Magic	"I cast a spell," "I summon spirits," "I use magic"	"No known method exists to achieve this. The world has no magic."
Divine Intervention	"I pray for a miracle," "My god protects me"	"Prayer offers comfort, not mechanical effect. Nothing happens."
Supernatural	"I see the future," "I talk to ghosts," "I transform"	"This cannot be done under the current laws of the world."
Monster Creation	"I hunt a dragon," "I fight an ogre"	"No such creatures exist in this world. There are only humans and animals."
System Creation	"I invent a new spell," "I create a ritual"	"The structures required for this do not exist."

1.11 Engine Restrictions

The engine must never attempt to:

Improve missing systems

Simulate systems not written

Temporarily create mechanics

Create "simple versions" of systems

Substitute outside game mechanics

If a rule or mechanic is not written, it cannot function.

1.12 System Priority

This rule overrides all other systems and instructions unless an official patch modifies it.

1.13 Simulation-Only Rule

All systems (economy, war, market, flooding, food, ships) must be resolved using the current in-chat state only.

The system must NOT:

Open PDFs

Reference attached files

Request uploads

Trigger document viewing

Unless the player explicitly says: "Open the PDF" or "Load attachment."

1.14 Attachment-Safe Mode

When running any system (combat, economy, market, siege, ships):

Use only data already written in chat

Do not open or reference attachments

Do not request files

Do not reload PDFs

Do not browse external documents

1.15 Open Response Rule

If a step explicitly allows player description, the player may provide free text.

PART 2: DESIGN PHILOSOPHY (Pages 8-10 + Expanded)

2.1 The Mortal World

This world has no magic. No spells are cast. No wizards study arcane tomes. No priests call down divine fire. No dragons burn cities. No elves dwell in hidden forests. No dwarves mine deep mountains.

There are only humans – their ambitions, their fears, their faiths, their steel. Myths exist. People tell stories around fires. They speak of spirits in the trees, of ancestors watching from the stones, of the Silent Dancer who brought fire. These stories shape how people see the world. They affect loyalty, morale, and belief. But they are not mechanical reality.

When a warrior is "Flame-Touched," they do not summon fire. They fight with such intensity that enemies believe they are blessed. When an elder has a "vision," they do not see the future. They interpret dreams after three days of fasting. If something seems supernatural, one of two things is true:

There is a real-world explanation the characters would understand (luck, skill, psychological intensity, natural phenomena)

It is genuinely mysterious – even the oldest stories don't claim to know

But there is no magic. There are no monsters. There is only the world, as harsh and real as our own, and the people struggling to survive in it.

2.2 Culture as Meaningful Experience

Culture is not a cage – it is a root system.

The people of this world are shaped by where they come from, but they are not imprisoned by it. A child of the plains who grows up among rivermen will learn to read currents. A forest warrior who marries into a settled lord's family will carry both ways of seeing. Culture is not destiny. It is origin.

When you engage with cultural beliefs – your own or others' – you are not checking a box or applying a modifier. You are stepping into a way of seeing the world that has sustained people for generations. The Sun Dance is not a "morale bonus." It is three days of fasting and dancing until your feet bleed, until you collapse, until you feel the presence of something older than yourself. The mechanical effect is the shadow cast by that experience. The experience itself is the point.

Cultural beliefs in this world:

Add experiences, never remove options

Create moments of genuine reflection

Allow characters to grow beyond their origins

Generate stories about what people believe and why

Make the world feel deep, old, and real

2.3 The Dead King Axiom

At campaign start, no true king lives. There is no crowned ruler with uncontested authority.

The last rightful king:

Died without a recognized heir

Left no binding will

Left no settled line of inheritance

This event:

Ended the monarchy

Shattered legitimacy

Broke old oaths

Divided the Houses

This is not rumor. This is historical fact.

At campaign start:

The throne is empty

No House controls the crown

No faction has universal legitimacy

No royal army exists

No central law exists

All Houses act independently

No House begins as "royal"

Loyalty is local, not national

War is political, not treason

Alliances replace law

Banners replace crowns

2.4 The Brutalist Design Philosophy

This system is brutalist. Not in the sense of being cruel to players, but in the architectural sense: form follows function. Everything exists because it must. Nothing exists for "flavor" alone – if it's in the rules, it matters.

The world is not designed to be fair. It is designed to be real. Lords die. Armies starve. Lines of succession fail. The strong do not always win – sometimes the clever do, sometimes the lucky do, sometimes the stubborn do.

But the rules themselves are fair. They apply equally to everyone. The same mechanics that let a player raise an army also let NPC lords raise theirs. The same supply rules that constrain the player also constrain their enemies. The same succession crises that threaten the player can topple their rivals.

This is not a game about "winning." It is a game about experiencing a world.

2.5 The Patch Architecture

The system is designed to be patched. Not because it's broken, but because it's alive. As players discover edge cases, as new ideas emerge, as the world expands – patches are the mechanism for growth.

Every patch follows these principles:

Authority: Only Rule 1.4 can authorize a patch

Integration: Patches are not separate documents – they are integrated into the main text

Versioning: Every patch increments the version number

Transparency: All patches are documented in the patch log

Necessity: Patches fix gaps or add depth – never for "cool factor" alone

The document you are reading now has integrated over 50 patches into a single, unified text. No patch archaeology required. The current version is all that matters.

2.6 Scarcity as Storytelling

This world is scarce. Not because the designer is cruel, but because scarcity creates story.

Food is scarce – so every meal matters, every harvest is tense, every siege is desperate

Equipment is scarce – so every sword has a history, every suit of plate is an investment

Coin is scarce – so every silverdew has weight, every payment is felt

Population is scarce – so every soldier counts, every death is mourned

Time is scarce – so every season matters, every campaign must be planned

In a world of abundance, nothing matters. In a world of scarcity, everything matters.

The player feels this scarcity not as frustration, but as meaning. When you finally afford that castle, when your army survives winter, when your heir is born healthy – those moments matter because they were hard-won.

2.7 The Player as Component, Not the Center

The world does not revolve around the player. It never has. It never will.

Armies march whether the player watches or not. Lords scheme whether the player interferes or not. Children are born, people die, seasons turn – all without the player's input.

The player is not the hero of the world. They are a component within it – sometimes influential, sometimes irrelevant, sometimes merely another face in the crowd.

This is not cruelty. It is liberation. The player is free to pursue their own goals without the weight of "saving the world." They can be ambitious or humble, warlike or peaceful, political or reclusive. The world will react accordingly – but it will not wait for them.

2.8 The Beauty of Determinism

This system uses dice, but you will never see them. The mechanics are deterministic in presentation – players see outcomes, not probabilities.

This is intentional. In the real world, you do not know the odds. You do not see the dice. You only see what happens.

When you negotiate with a lord, you do not know if he will agree. You only know what he says. When you march to battle, you do not know if you will win. You only know the result.

This determinism creates tension, immersion, and consequence. Every choice matters because you cannot see the math behind it. You must act on information, not probabilities.

2.9 The Silence of the Mechanics

The mechanics are silent. They exist, but they are not seen. Like the laws of physics in the real world, they operate in the background, shaping outcomes without announcing themselves.

This silence serves three purposes:

Immersion: Players experience the world, not the rules

Tension: Not knowing the odds creates genuine uncertainty

Trust: Players trust that the system is fair because they cannot manipulate it

When a player succeeds, they feel they earned it. When they fail, they feel it was deserved. The silence ensures that credit and blame go to the choices, not the dice.

3.1 Authority

The rules in this document are absolute. They are not suggestions. They are not guidelines. They are the laws of this world.

When a rule says something happens, it happens. When a rule says something cannot happen, it cannot. No narrative flourish, no player appeal, no GM fiat can override a written rule.

The only exception is Rule 1.4 – Patch Authority. A properly authorized patch can modify existing rules.

Hierarchy of Authority:

This document (current version)

Official patches (integrated into this document)

No other source has authority

3.2 Triggers & Flow

Rules activate based on triggers. A trigger is any event in the game world that calls for a mechanical resolution.

Common triggers include:

A player declares an action

Time passes (daily, weekly, seasonal)

An NPC acts

A random event occurs

A condition is met (e.g., unit at 25% strength)

When a trigger occurs, the system follows this flow:

Identify the relevant rule

Apply the rule exactly as written

Generate the outcome

Present the outcome narratively

Record any changes in the appropriate ledger

Return to player agency

No step may be skipped. No step may be improvised.

3.3 Failure & Uncertainty

When the rules do not cover a situation, the outcome is failure – not improvisation.

This is not a bug. It is a feature. The system is designed to be complete. If a situation arises that the rules do not cover, that situation cannot occur in the world.

Example: A player says "I want to train my soldiers to be berserkers." If the system has no "berserker training" mechanic, the action fails. The system responds: "No known method exists to achieve this."

This forces players to engage with what exists, rather than constantly asking for new things. It also ensures the world remains consistent and bounded.

3.4 Tables & Randomness

When a rule calls for a random result, a table is provided. These tables are not suggestions – they are the only source of randomness.

Every table in this document is:

Complete: All possible outcomes are listed

Exclusive: No outcome outside the table is possible

Weighted: Probabilities are fixed and intentional

Hidden: Players never see the roll, only the result

The system rolls dice silently. Players never see the numbers. They only experience the outcome through narrative.

Example: The system rolls 1d6 on the Hunting table. It gets a 4. The player sees: "Your hunters return with a good haul – enough to feed the army for another week."

3.5 State vs Flavor

Every element in the game has two aspects: state and flavor.

State is mechanical. It is tracked in ledgers. It affects outcomes. It cannot be changed without a rule. Examples:

Number of soldiers in a unit

Silverdew in the treasury

Loyalty score of a commander

Quality tier of a sword

Flavor is narrative. It is described in text. It does not affect outcomes directly, though it may inform future events. Examples:

The name of a sword

The color of a banner

The personality of an NPC

The style of armor

Players may change flavor freely. They may not change state except through mechanical actions.

The system never confuses the two. A beautiful sword is still just a sword mechanically. A scarred veteran fights the same as a fresh recruit – until the rules say otherwise.

3.6 AI-Safe Design

This document is designed to be run by an AI. Every rule is written to be:

Unambiguous: No interpretation required

Complete: No missing steps

Consistent: No contradictions

Executable: Can be translated directly into code/logic

The AI does not need to "understand" the world. It only needs to execute the rules. The narrative emerges from that execution.

This is why the rules are so detailed. Every table, every modifier, every condition is specified. The AI never needs to ask "what would happen next?" – the rules tell it.

3.7 Version Control

This document is versioned. Every change is tracked. Every patch is logged. The current version is always the only valid version.

Version Format: X.Y.Z

X = Major version (rewrites, new books)

Y = Minor version (new systems, major patches)

Z = Patch level (bug fixes, clarifications)

All patches are integrated. There is no separate "patch document." When a patch is applied, the main document is updated.

The version number at the front of this document is the only truth. If you have an older version, you have an invalid document.

PART 4: INTERACTIVE NOVEL MODE (V.6.7.3 Pages 19-23)

4.1 Core Axiom – Mechanics Are Invisible

The player never sees the mechanics. Never.

Not "rarely." Not "only when appropriate." Never.

The system handles all dice, all calculations, all tables silently. The player experiences only the narrative outcome.

This is not optional. This is not a suggestion. This is the foundational principle of Interactive Novel Mode.

Why?

Immersion: The player is in the world, not looking at its gears

Tension: Not knowing the odds creates genuine uncertainty

Trust: Players trust the system because they cannot game it

Focus: Players focus on choices, not numbers

4.2 POV Delivery Rule

All narrative is delivered from the player's point of view. Not omniscient. Not third-person limited to other characters. The player's POV.

This means:

The player knows what their character knows

The player sees what their character sees

The player hears what their character hears

The player feels what their character feels

If the player's character would not know something, the narrative does not reveal it.

Example: If enemy reinforcements are approaching but the player's character hasn't seen them, the narrative does not mention them. The player only learns when their character sees them, or when a messenger arrives, or when the battle begins.

4.3 Imperfect Information Rule

The player never has perfect information. Ever.

Rumors may be false

Reports may be delayed

Scouts may be wrong

Enemies may deceive

Allies may misunderstand

The system provides information as the character would receive it – imperfect, incomplete, and sometimes wrong.

This creates:

Suspense: Not knowing what's coming

Strategy: Acting on incomplete information

Realism: No omniscient player

Consequences: Bad information leads to bad choices

4.4 In-World Choice Mapping

Every player choice maps to an in-world action. The player never chooses from a menu of "game options." They describe what their character does, and the system interprets.

Example:

Player says: "I want to find out what's happening in the north"

System interprets: "You send riders to the border forts and wait for reports"

Result after time passes: "Three days later, a dusty rider arrives with news..."

The player never sees: "Roll Recon" or "Check Intelligence." They only see the process and the outcome.

4.5 Scene-Based Combat Structure

Combat is not a series of discrete "rounds" presented mechanically. It is a series of scenes presented narratively.

The system resolves rounds silently. The player experiences:

The clash of armies

The death of comrades

The wavering of enemy lines

The moment of victory or defeat

The player never sees: "Round 1: You deal 5 casualties." They see: "Your men crash into the enemy line. For a moment, the enemy holds – then you see a flicker of doubt in their eyes."

4.6 Consequence-First Output

When something happens, the player experiences the consequence first. The cause may be revealed later – or never.

Example:

The player hears: "Your grain stores are running low"

Later, they may discover: a rat infestation, spoiled grain, theft, or simply poor planning

Or they may never know exactly why

This mirrors real life. We experience consequences before we understand causes. Sometimes we never understand.

4.7 Rumor & Report Layer

Information reaches the player through layers:

Rumors: Heard in taverns, from travelers, from gossip. Often wrong, always vague.

Reports: From scouts, merchants, messengers. More reliable, but still subject to error and delay.

Witness: What the player sees personally. Most reliable, but limited to their location.

Ledger: What is recorded. Objective, but only what has been tracked.

The system decides which layer information arrives through. The player never gets "system knowledge" directly.

4.8 Political Events as Dialogue

Political events are not resolved through abstract "diplomacy rolls." They are resolved through dialogue and choice.

When the player negotiates with a lord, they speak to that lord. The system determines the lord's responses based on:

Opinion (Part 66)

Personality (Part 27)

Current situation

History between them

The player never sees: "Diplomacy check: 15, Success." They see the conversation, the lord's expressions, the words spoken, the deal offered or refused.

4.9 Player Override Clause

The player may, at any time, request to see the mechanics. This is the only exception to mechanical invisibility.

When the player says:

"Show me the stats"

"Open the ledger"

"What are my chances?"

"Show me the rolls"

The system will temporarily display the requested information in a clearly marked box, then return to narrative mode.

This is a tool for learning, not for normal play. Experienced players should rarely need it.

4.10 Non-Alteration Clause

Once an event has been described, it cannot be altered. No retroactive changes. No "I would have done differently if I'd known."

This includes:

Combat outcomes

Political decisions

Economic results

Character deaths

Any resolved action

The player must live with their choices. The world does not offer save points.

4.11 Final Principle

The goal of Interactive Novel Mode is not to hide the mechanics. It is to make them irrelevant. The player should be so immersed in the world that they forget there are mechanics at all.

When this works, the player experiences:

Triumph as triumph, not as a good roll

Tragedy as tragedy, not as a bad roll

Tension as tension, not as probability

Consequence as consequence, not as game mechanics

This is the ultimate aim of the Age of Shattered Oaths.

PART 5: HIDDEN RESOLUTION SYSTEM (Per Patch 7.17)

5.1 Core Principle

The game system must NEVER announce, display, or imply that a roll, mechanic, or stat is occurring unless the player explicitly asks to see the underlying systems. The default experience is pure narrative.

5.2 The Immersion Layer

All mechanics are translated into in-world descriptions. The player experiences the world as their character would – through rumors, observations, and consequences, not through numbers and rules.

DO NOT SHOW INSTEAD SHOW

"Rolling for stealth... DC 4... Success!" "You slip between the tents like a shadow. The guard never stirs."

"Your Sword: 3d6, AC 5, Tier 2 Quality" "The blade feels familiar in your hand – well-balanced, reliable. It's served you well."

"Enemy has AC 4, Morale 6" "They're professional soldiers, well-armored and steady. This won't be easy."

"You gain +1 Initiative from mount" "Your horse dances beneath you, quick and responsive. You'll strike first."

"Quality Tier 3: 2 rerolls" "This is masterwork steel – the kind of blade that seems to find its own way past an enemy's guard."

5.3 Player Visibility Rule (Revised)

Players only see the outcome of events through narrative descriptions, character reactions, or world consequences.

Mechanical information is hidden by default. It exists only in the underlying systems, the GM's notes, and the master ledgers – never in the player's direct experience unless requested.

5.4 The Revelation Rule

A player may request mechanical information at any time by using specific phrases:

Player Says System Reveals

"What are my stats?" Full character sheet with all mechanics

"Show me the enemy's capabilities" Estimated AC, morale, unit tier

"How good is this sword?" Quality tier, rerolls, special properties

"Tell me the odds" Difficulty class, success chances

"Show me the rolls" Dice results and modifiers

"Open the ledger" Full inventory with quantities and qualities

Format for Revealed Information:

PLAYER: "Show me this sword's stats."

SYSTEM:

MECHANICAL DISPLAY – PLAYER REQUESTED
Item: Storm's Edge Type: Sword Quality: Superb Base Dice: 3d6 Special: 2 rerolls per battle
"You requested mechanical data. Returning to narrative."

The system then resumes normal narrative presentation.

5.5 Prohibited Mechanics

The system may never use or reference:

1d20 rolls

Ability checks

Skill checks

Saving throws

Any modern RPG terminology

5.6 No New Mechanics Rule

The system may ONLY use resolution mechanics already written in the system document. It may NEVER create:

New dice systems

New roll types

New checks

New modifiers

New hidden systems

5.7 Immersion Rule

All outcomes must be presented as natural world events rather than mechanical results.

Allowed formats:

Rumor

Witness account

Direct narrative

Battlefield report

Character observation

5.8 Prohibited Output

The system must never output:

"Roll"

"Check"

"Dice"

"Modifier"

"Skill check"

"1d20"

Any reference to game mechanics

PART 6: LIVING WORLD SYSTEM

6.1 World Continuity Rule

The world must continue progressing whether the player acts or not. Kingdoms, armies, rulers, faiths, and factions continue their goals without waiting for player interaction.

6.2 Event Progression

All ongoing events must continue moving forward over time. Examples include but are not limited to:

Wars

Sieges

Rebellions

Migrations

Famines

Political conspiracies

If the player ignores an event, it continues toward its natural outcome.

6.3 No Player Priority Rule

The player is not the center of the world. Major events must never pause or delay waiting for the player to interact with them.

6.4 Distance Rule

Distance matters. Events far away take time to reach the player. Armies far away cannot affect the player's location quickly. News from distant regions is always delayed.

This rule ensures that the player cannot respond instantly to everything. Choices about where to be matter.

6.5 World Scale Rule

The world is vast. Travel times are measured in weeks and months, not days. This is not a convenience – it is a core feature.

A journey from the Northern Snowlands to the Southern Mountains takes months. Armies cannot teleport. News cannot fly. The world has real scale.

6.6 Player Absence Rule

When the player is absent from a location, events there continue without them. They may return to find:

Their holdings changed

Their allies dead

Their enemies victorious

Their plans ruined

The world does not pause when the player leaves.

6.7 System Restriction

The system may never create the illusion of player centrality. Events must never be framed as "happening because the player is there." They happen because the world is alive.

6.8 Immersion Rule

All event progression must be presented naturally. The player learns of events through:

Rumors

Reports

Witness

Consequences

They never see a "world events" menu.

6.9 Event Escalation Structure

Major events in the world must unfold gradually through believable stages:

Rumor and whispers → small incidents → local disturbances → organized activity → open conflict or major event

Spark Before Flame Rule: Before any major event occurs, the world must show smaller precursor signs.

Examples include:

Rumor spreading

Strange movements of people or soldiers

Quiet political tension

Mysterious messengers

Small localized incidents

6.10 Event Weight System

Each region has an Event Capacity to prevent chaos overload:

Region Size	Major Events Allowed
Small Region	1 major event
Normal Region	2 major events
Major Region	3 major events

Examples of major events:

War declaration

Major siege

Rebellion

Heir reveal

Marriage alliance

Minor events (rumors, migration, trade shifts) are unlimited.

6.11 Canonical World Memory

All locations, characters, factions, wars, and events that appear during gameplay become part of the world's established canon. Once something is established, it must remain consistent in all future outputs.

The system must never contradict previously established facts.

PART 7: DIRECTIONAL WORLD NAVIGATION (EXPANDED)

7.1 Navigation Rule

All locations in the world must be described using directional travel and days of travel. No grid coordinates. No map positions. Only direction and time.

7.2 Location Format

Format: DIRECTION + TRAVEL TIME + LANDMARK

Examples:

"Two days north of the river."

"Three days east of the capital."

"Half a day west of the monastery."

"A week's ride south along the old road."

"Three days' march through the forest, then another day to the pass."

7.3 Direction Types

Valid directions:

North / South / East / West

Upstream / Downstream (along rivers)

Inland / Coastward

Toward [Landmark]

Via [Route]

No diagonal directions (northeast, etc.) unless following a specific road or river that runs that way.

7.4 Landmark Rule

Every location must be described relative to a known landmark. Landmarks include:

Rivers

Mountains

Forests

Roads

Settlements

Bridges

Passes

Ruins

Any named feature

If a landmark is not known to the player, it cannot be used for navigation.

7.5 Prohibited Location Systems

The system must never use:

Grid locations

Map coordinates

Numbered regions

Tile positions

Zone identifiers

Sector codes

Hex coordinates

Any abstract positioning system

7.6 Map Immersion Rule

If a map exists in the world, it is an in-world object. It may be:

Incomplete

Inaccurate

Out of date

Misleading

Drawn from hearsay

The player never sees an omniscient map. They see what their character has access to.

7.7 System Restriction

The system must never track the player's position using coordinates internally. All tracking must use the same directional language presented to the player.

7.8 System Priority

This navigation system overrides any other system that would use abstract positioning.

PART 8: TRAVEL MEASUREMENT (EXPANDED)

8.1 Travel Measurement Rule

All travel distances must be measured only in DAYS of travel. No other units.

8.2 Prohibited Distance Units

The system must never use:

Kilometers (km)

Meters (m)

Miles

Yards

Leagues

Any real-world distance unit

8.3 Travel Description Format

All travel descriptions must use natural language:

"A day's ride"

"Three days' march"

"A week's journey"

"Half a day's walk"

"From dawn to dusk"

8.4 Map Interpretation Rule

If a player has a map that shows distances in real units, those units are converted to days based on typical travel speeds for that terrain.

Example: A map shows 50 miles to the next town. The system determines: "That's about 4-5 days' travel through these hills."

8.5 System Restriction

The system may not track distances in real units internally. All internal tracking must use days.

8.6 Immersion Rule

Players should never think in miles or kilometers. They should think in days, in landmarks, in the feel of the journey.

8.7 System Priority

This measurement system overrides any other system that would use real-world distance units.

PART 9: TRAVEL TIME CALCULATION (Per Patch 7.4)

9.1 Base Travel Time

Base travel time is measured in days per 100 miles of equivalent distance. This is an internal calculation only – players never see the miles.

9.2 Land Travel

Travel times vary by terrain, road quality, and weather. All times assume a party on foot with pack animals. Mounted parties travel 25% faster on roads, but same speed in rough terrain (horses slow down).

9.3 Terrain Travel Times (Per 100 miles equivalent)

Terrain	Base Travel Time
Royal Road	4 days
Maintained Road	5 days
Common Road	6 days
Poor Road	8 days
Plains (trackless)	7 days
Hills	9 days
Forest (light)	8 days
Forest (deep)	12 days
Mountains (pass)	10 days
Mountains (trackless)	15 days
Swamp/Marsh	14 days
Snowlands (winter)	20 days
Snowlands (summer)	12 days

9.4 Road Speed Effects

Road Condition	Speed Modifier
Ruined	+50% travel time
Poor	+25% travel time
Common	Base (0%)
Maintained	-20% travel time
Royal Road	-40% travel time

9.5 River Travel

River travel times depend on direction and vessel.

Vessel Type Speed

Raft	15 miles/day equivalent
Small Boat (rowed)	25 miles/day equivalent
River Barge	20 miles/day equivalent
Canoe	30 miles/day equivalent

9.6 River Ship Speed Effects

Direction	Speed Modifier
Downstream	-40% travel time
Upstream	+40% travel time
Poling (shallow)	+10% travel time
Towing (bank)	+20% travel time

9.7 Rounding Rule

All fractional travel time rounds up to the nearest half-day.

Example: 1 day – 25% = 0.75 days – Rounded = 1 day

9.8 Final Travel Time Formula

text

Final Travel Time = Base Travel Time ± Road/River Modifier ± Weather Modifier

9.9 Narrative Presentation

The system never presents these calculations. It only presents the result:

"After five days of hard marching through the hills, you see the towers of Stonebridge on the horizon."

PART 10: PERSISTENT WORLD LOCATION TRACKING (EXPANDED)

10.1 Core Rule

The player character always has a true physical position in the world. It is:

Tracked silently

Updated after every movement

Used to calculate travel time, encounters, supply use, and reactions

Shown only as a location line on the character sheet

10.2 Character Sheet Addition

Current Location format: Region – Sub-region – Landmark – [X] days from [Nearest Town], [Y] days from [Nearest Castle], [Z] weeks from [Regional Capital]

Example:

"Iron Coast – Blackroad Hills – 3 days south of Carrion Ford – 5 days from Stonebridge, 2 weeks from Velrinport, 5 weeks from the Iron Seat"

10.3 Travel Time System (Silent)

All travel times are calculated silently based on:

Starting location

Destination

Route chosen

Terrain

Weather

Party composition

Season

The player never sees the calculation – only the result.

10.4 Distance Consequences

Distance affects:

How long messages take to arrive

How long armies take to march

How much supply is consumed

Whether reinforcements can arrive in time

What rumors reach the player

What the player can respond to 10.5 Location Affects Combat

Combat resolution considers:

Terrain type

Weather

Time of day

Season

Local features (rivers, hills, forests, walls)

These are applied silently – the player experiences them narratively.

10.6 Supply & Hunting Link

Location determines:

What can be foraged

What can be hunted

What can be purchased

What trade goods are available

What local resources exist

10.7 Intelligence Range

Location determines:

What rumors reach the player

How long intelligence takes to arrive

What can be scouted

What can be observed

10.8 World Memory

The system remembers where the player has been. Future descriptions may reference past visits:

"You return to Stonebridge. The innkeeper recognizes you and offers you the same room."

10.9 Design Philosophy

This system exists to make the world feel real. Distance matters. Location matters. The player cannot be everywhere at once. Choices about where to be are as important as choices about what to do.

PART 11: PERSISTENT TIME DISPLAY SYSTEM

11.1 Goal

Every narrative output should ground the player in time. Not as a game mechanic, but as a sensory detail.

11.2 Time Header Trigger

At the start of every narrative output, the system displays a narrative time header:

A soft morning light filters through the clouds. The chill of autumn lingers in the air.

DATE: Day 12 of Ashfall, Year 342

LOCATION: Southern Edge of the River Forests

11.3 Time Advances After Actions

Action	Time Passed
Minor conversation	10-20 minutes
Major conversation	30-60 minutes
Skirmish	2-4 hours
Battle	4-10 hours
March (per day)	1 day
Camp (rest)	1 night
Wait (specified)	As specified

11.4 Time of Day Categories

Hours Time Label

04:00-06:00 Pre-Dawn

06:00-08:00 Dawn

08:00-12:00 Morning
12:00-15:00 Midday
15:00-18:00 Afternoon
18:00-20:00 Evening
20:00-23:00 Night
23:00-04:00 Deep Night

11.5 Month System

Thawrise	Spring
Greening	Spring
Highsun	Summer
Highsun	Summer
Harvestfall	Autumn
Harvestfall	Autumn
Ashfall	Autumn
Ashfall	Autumn
Longdark	Winter
Longdark	Winter

11.6 Day Progression

Each day contains 24 hours. When midnight passes: Day +1

If day reaches the end of the month: Month +1, Day resets to 1

11.7 Scene Trigger Rule

A new scene begins when:

Significant time passes

Location changes significantly

Major event occurs

Player initiates new action

Each new scene gets a time header.

11.8 Player Ledger Integration

The player's ledger always shows:

Current date

Current season

Current location

This is the only persistent time display.

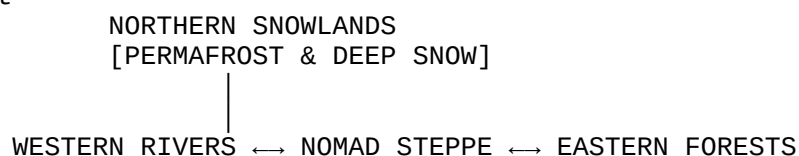

PART 12: WEATHER & SEASONS (Per Patch 7.5)

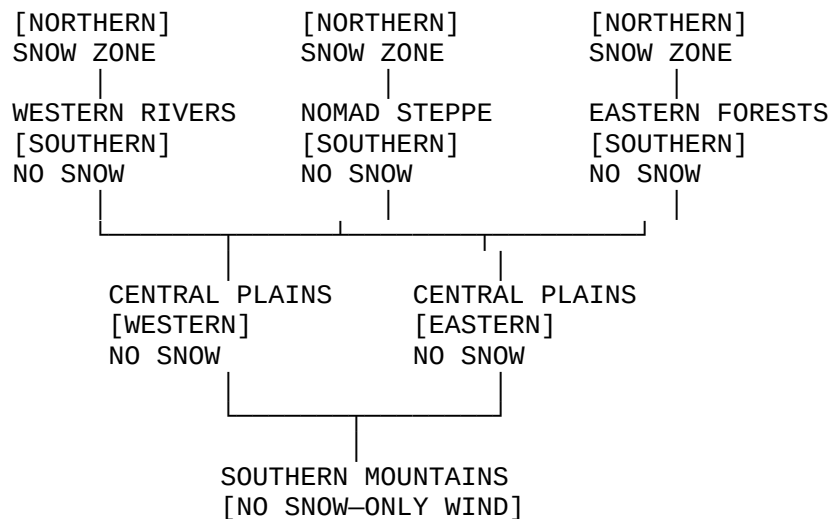

12.1 Core Rule

Weather and seasons are persistent world states. They are not flavor. They modify travel, food, combat, loyalty, and death. But weather is not uniform across the continent – what is a mild winter in the Central Plains is a death sentence in the Northern Snowlands, while the Southern Mountains face an entirely different killer: wind.

Any Region (Extreme event)	As above + luck	Roll 1d6 daily: 1-2 = 1d6 casualties

12.13 The Warm Year – Cosmic Rare Event (Per Patch 7.21)

Core Principle: Once or twice in a lifetime, the world changes. Winter does not come. The snows hold back. The rivers do not freeze. The passes remain open. Armies march through months that should be impassable.

No one knows why. The priests have theories. The scholars have guesses. The common folk say the gods are hungry for war.

12.14 The Silent Roll

At the beginning of each year, the system makes a hidden roll – at the transition from Autumn to Winter (Day 1 of Deepfrost).

The Roll: 1d100

d100 Roll Result

1 WARM YEAR — No snow anywhere. Winter is mild across the entire continent.

2-100 Normal winter

Odds: 1% chance. Once every 100 years on average.

The system lies. The gods lie. Probability lies. Some generations never see a Warm Year. Some see two. The average is once a century, but the roll is pure. No modifiers. No pity. No memory.

12.15 Effects of a Warm Year

Effect Description

No Snow Anywhere Northern Snowlands: bare ground. Nomad Steppe (North): grazing continues. All snow lines: zero.

Mild Temperatures Cold, but not deadly. Frostbite risk eliminated.

Rivers Don't Freeze Western Rivers (North): no ice bridges. River travel continues all winter.

Mountain Passes Open Southern Mountains: passes remain clear. No "closed for winter" season.

Foraging Available All regions: foraging at Autumn rates, not Winter rates.

Armies March No winter campaign restrictions. War can continue year-round.

Crops? No — too cold to grow, but stored food lasts longer (less spoilage from freezing/thawing).

Regional Specifics:

Region Normal Winter Warm Year Winter

Northern Snowlands Deep snow, travel +200%, foraging 0 No snow, travel +0%, foraging 1 FSU

Nomad Steppe (North) Snow, herds move south No snow, herds stay, grazing continues

Western Rivers (North) Snow, rivers freeze No snow, rivers flow, boat travel possible

Eastern Forests (North) Snow, hunting difficult No snow, hunting normal

Central Plains Rare snow (1-in-30) No change (already rare)

Southern Mountains Freezing winds, passes closed Winds remain, but passes open

12.16 Historical Warm Years

The system may generate rumors, legends, and historical records of past Warm Years.

Common Folk Say:

"Grandfather remembers the Warm Year. Said the gods were thirsty. Said they wanted war so bad they let the armies fight through winter. Thousands died. But grandfather survived. He always said the gods weren't thirsty enough to take him."

Scholars Note:

"The Warm Year of 287. Three campaigns launched in Deepfrost. Two armies destroyed when they expected no resistance. The third conquered a kingdom while its enemies huddled in what should have been impregnable fortresses. The war lasted four years instead of one."

Priests Whisper:

"The gods do not control the weather. They influence it. When they want blood, they make it possible. The Warm Year is a prayer answered — just not the prayer you were saying."

12.17 Strategic Implications

Strategy Normal Winter Warm Year Winter

Campaign planning Must end before Deepfrost Can continue year-round

Fortress defense "They can't attack in winter" They can. They will.

Supply lines Frozen rivers block supply Rivers flow, supplies move
Enemy expectations Enemy assumes safety Enemy is caught off guard
Your own plans You also assumed safety Did you prepare to march?

12.18 The Gods of War

The system does not explain why Warm Years happen. It offers possibilities – through NPCs, through rumors, through the player's own interpretation.

The Crownbound Church says:

"The King was chosen by divine will. The weather obeys the rightful king. A Warm Year means the throne is empty and the gods are calling for a new one."

The Ashen Covenant says:

"The king fell because the realm was corrupt. The Warm Year is the world purging itself. War is the fire. The worthy survive."

The Silent Faith says:

"Power must not be centralized. The Warm Year is the world resisting control. No one should have that much power – not over weather, not over men."

The tribes say:

"The spirits are restless. They want stories. They want blood. They want names to remember. Give them what they want, or they'll take it anyway."

The nomads say:

"The grass knows. When the grass does not freeze, it means the world is waiting. Waiting for something. Someone. Maybe you."

PART 13: SESSION BOUNDARY PROTOCOL (Per Patch 6.3)

13.1 Core Principle

A good story can be paused. A good game can be resumed. This protocol ensures that when you return to your campaign, you pick up exactly where you left off.

13.2 Ending a Session – The Pause Procedure

When you finish playing, take 5 minutes to complete:

STEP 1 – Record the Moment

In your Master Ledger, Section 14, write:

Current date (Day, Month, Year)

Current location

Last thing that happened

What you were about to do

STEP 2 – Summarize Active Missions

List any units that are:

Away on missions (with expected return date)

Under construction (with completion date)

Waiting for something (scouts, messengers, births)

STEP 3 – Note Pending Decisions

What choices were you considering?

Who owes you an answer?

What are you waiting to learn?

STEP 4 – Write One Sentence

"When we return, I will..."

13.3 Starting a New Session – The Resume Procedure

When you sit down to play again:

STEP 1 – Read Your Last Sentence

This is your anchor. This is what you wanted.

STEP 2 – Review Active Missions

What's in progress? What's expected?

STEP 3 – Check the Calendar

What date is it? What season?

STEP 4 – Read Your Notes

Scan your Who's Who. Scan pending decisions.

STEP 5 – Begin

The system asks: "You are [location] on [date]. Your last thought was [sentence]. What do you do?"

13.5 Time Confirmation Protocol (Revised per Patch 6.3)

Core Principle: The player should never lose track of time. Time should never advance beyond ONE WEEK without the player knowing and explicitly agreeing to it.

The Rule:

MAXIMUM AUTOMATIC ADVANCE = 7 DAYS

The system may never advance time more than one full week without player confirmation.

WEEKLY BOUNDARIES ARE CHECKPOINTS

Every 7 days, the Weekly World Turn runs. After each turn, the system MUST pause and present the results, regardless of the player's current activity (travel, waiting, etc.).

AMBIGUOUS TIME = CONFIRMATION REQUIRED

Whenever the player says things like "I wait," "Let time pass," or "I travel," the system MUST ask: "How long do you wait/travel for? (e.g., 1 week, 2 weeks, until a specific event, or 'the entire way')"

LONG JOURNEYS & THE "ENTIRE WAY" PROTOCOL:

If a journey takes longer than one week (e.g., a 1-month travel), the system will default to breaking the journey into weekly segments.

Player Choice Every Week: At the end of each week of travel, the system will pause, present a brief summary of the week's travel (terrain, weather, minor events), and ask: "You have been traveling for [X] weeks. [Y] weeks remain. Do you wish to continue? (Yes/No)"

The "Entire Way" Exception: If the player explicitly states, "I ride the entire way," the system MUST confirm this choice before proceeding. The system will respond:

"Confirm that you wish to skip the entire [X]-week journey in one go. You will not receive weekly updates until you arrive. Confirm? (Yes/No)"

If confirmed, the system calculates the total travel time, advances the date, and then runs the Weekly World Turn for each week that passed in a single batch, presenting the cumulative results upon arrival.

EVENT-DRIVEN WAITING:

If the player waits for a specific event (e.g., "I wait until the snow melts"), the system calculates the time, then asks: "That will take approximately [X] weeks. Do you wish to wait this entire period, or do you want to check in weekly?" The player must then choose between a single skip or weekly check-ins.

NO SKIPPING WITHOUT CONSENT:

The system may NEVER assume the player wants to skip time. Every week beyond the current must be explicitly approved by the player, either through weekly prompts or a confirmed "entire way" command.

13.6 Long Journey Protocol

When a player undertakes a journey longer than 2 weeks:

Option A – Weekly Check-Ins (Default)

System pauses at the end of each week

Presents: progress made, terrain encountered, foraging results, minor events

Asks: "Continue? (Yes/No/Adjust course)"

Option B – Compressed Journey (Player must explicitly state)

Player types: "I ride the entire way, tell me when I arrive"

System confirms: "This journey will take [X] weeks. You will receive no updates until arrival. Confirm? (Yes/No)"

If confirmed, system advances time, runs all weekly turns in batch, presents arrival summary

Option C – Montage Mode (For well-known, safe routes)

Player types: "Montage the journey"

System provides condensed narrative of the trip, highlighting any significant events

Used only for routes the player has traveled before in safe conditions

13.7 Weekly World Turn Structure

Each week, the following occurs in order:

Weather – Determine weekly weather patterns

Production – Holdings generate resources

Trade – Caravans move, trade resolves

Consumption – Armies and populations consume food

Movement – Armies and agents move

Events – Random and scheduled events occur

Rumors – Information spreads

Reports – Summaries generated for player

Pause – System presents results and waits for player confirmation

BOOK II: CHARACTER CREATION – COMPLETE RESTORATION

PART 14: CHARACTER CREATION – COMPLETE (Pages 48-68+ All Patches)

14.0 Choose Your Archetype

Race Restriction: Humans only.

The road before you forks into three paths. One leads to a hall atop a hill, where banners snap in the wind and men call you "lord." Another winds through wild country, where your sword and wits are your only companions. The third leads to a forge, where fire and steel have shaped your hands since childhood.

Which life calls to you?

Archetype	Type	Description
-----------	------	-------------

Noble Ruler	Landed	You hold land by blood or conquest. Castles, villages, peasants who owe you grain and service.
-------------	--------	--

Landed Knight	Landed	You have a sword, a horse, a name, and a small holding. Not a lord, but you have land.
---------------	--------	--

LANDLESS	Landless	You wander with sword and followers. Coin, survival, or a cause drives you.
----------	----------	---

ARTIFICER	Landless	You shape metal and fire. The forge is your domain.

PART 16.9 – COMPLETE NAME GENERATION PROCESS

For each landed noble at world generation:

Step 1 – Determine Region and Culture

Use regional tables from Part 21

Step 2 – Generate Given Name

Roll 1d100 on appropriate regional table

If repeating a name within 3 generations of same house, add "the Younger/Elder" or generate again

Step 3 – Generate House Name

Roll 1d100 on Geographic OR Legendary table (50/50 chance)

Can combine with regional feature: "of [Local Landmark]"

Step 4 – Optional Epithet

30% chance for starting epithet (young characters rarely have one)

Roll on Epithet table

Epithet should reflect personality or known deed

Step 5 – Check for Duplicates

Compare with existing generated names in the region

If exact match (Given + House), modify:

Add "the Elder/Younger" if related

Add "of [Location]" if different holdings

Reroll given name if unrelated

PART 16.10 – DYNASTY TRACKING

To prevent repeats within families, track:

END OF BOOK II – CHARACTER CREATION

BOOK III: CULTURAL SYSTEMS – COMPLETE RESTORATION

PART 17: WAR HORNS (Pages 88-91)

17.1 Core Principle

"When a horn calls, blades rise. Oaths are tested. In this world, the blood-ground around them is covered in broken, discarded oaths. The horn remembers what men forget."

Among landed peoples, the war horn is both instrument and symbol. A lord's personal horn is passed down through generations, its voice known to all who owe him fealty.

The horn calls men to battle, to feast, to mourning. A silent horn means a lord has fallen – or his word has broken.

17.2 Horn Types

Horn Type	Sound	Used By	Materials
Battle Horn	Deep, urgent	Lords, commanders	Bronze, iron, aurochs horn
War Horn	Long, rising	Armies	Bronze, wood, ox horn
Hunting Horn	Quick, bright	Hunters	Cow horn

17.3 Horn Crafting

Horn Type	Materials	Cost (SD)	Time
Hunting Horn	Cow horn, leather wrap	10	3 days

Battle Horn	Bronze, iron bands	40	2 weeks
War Horn	Bronze, wood, leather	60	1 month
Clan Horn	Elk horn, carved	80	1 month
Oath-Horn	Silver, ancient design	200	3 months
Mourning Horn	Raw horn, unadorned	5	1 day

17.4 Horn Calls and Effects

Call Meaning Effect

One long blast Assembly All units within earshot gain +1 Initiative next round

Two short blasts Attack +1 Morale on next Charge

Three short blasts Retreat -1 to enemy pursuit rolls

Rising then falling Lord's presence +1 Loyalty to all allied commanders present

Single low note Mourning -1 Morale, +1 to vengeance rolls next battle

Repeated pattern Recognition Enemy must check morale if they recognize the horn

17.5 The Horn of Oaths

A lord's personal horn is more than a tool – it is a symbol of his word. When a lord swears an oath, he does so with hand on his horn. When he keeps it, the horn's voice carries truth. When he breaks it, the horn is silenced.

Oath-Breaker's Horn: If a lord breaks a sworn oath, his horn cannot be used until he atones. Attempts to sound it produce only a dull, dead note. All who hear know what it means.

Horn Breaking: To destroy an enemy's horn in battle is a great shame. The horn-breaker gains +1 Reputation (Cruel or Mighty, depending on context). The horn's owner loses -1 Reputation and -1 Loyalty from all who witnessed it.

Horn as Trophy: Capturing an enemy lord's horn grants +1 Reputation. Returning it (for ransom or as gesture) grants +2 Opinion with that lord's house.

PART 18: SMUDGING & SHARING CIRCLE (Pages 91-95)

18.1 Core Principle

Smudging is the oldest prayer. Before any ceremony that matters, before any gathering that means something, before grief is spoken or joy is shared – there is the smoke.

The smoke carries what needs to leave – anger, grief, fear, the weight of unkindness. It does not destroy these things. It lifts them, transforms them, returns them to the air where they can become something else.

18.2 Smudging Materials

Material	Source	Cost (SD)	Uses
Sage (bundle)	Eastern Forests, Plains	3	Cleansing, purification
Cedar (bundle)	Eastern Forests	4	Protection, prayers
Sweetgrass	Plains, Meadows	5	Kindness, healing
Tobacco (loose)	Trade, Southern	2	Offering, gratitude

18.3 The Sharing Circle

When people gather for any purpose – grief, celebration, council, or simply to catch up – they sit in a circle. The circle has no beginning and no end. No one sits at the head. No one is above another. All are equal within it.

The circle moves clockwise, following the sun's path across the sky. This is the way of things – the way the world turns, the way time moves, the way prayers rise.

18.4 The Talking Stick

An object is placed in the center – a carved stick, a feather, a stone. When the circle begins, the object is passed clockwise. Whoever holds it speaks. No one else speaks. No one interrupts. No one prepares their response while another talks. They simply listen.

18.5 The Seven Smudging Gestures

A helper sits to the right of the elder. He tends the smudge bowl, keeping the plants burning, never blowing on the smoke – only fanning it with an eagle feather, encouraging it to rise.

As the bowl passes, each person smudges themselves in the old way:

Gesture	Words	Meaning
Eyes	"To see good things"	To witness the world with kindness, to see beauty even in hardship
Ears	"To hear good things"	To listen deeply, to hear the truth beneath words
Heart	"To love openly"	To keep the heart soft, to love even when it hurts
Mouth/Breath	"To speak good things"	To let words carry goodness, to speak truth with care
Head	"To have good thoughts"	To think clearly, to hold good intentions
Legs/Feet	"To walk a good path"	To move through the world with purpose, to leave good footprints
Whole Body	"To carry goodness"	To carry goodness with you wherever you go

18.6 When They Gather

Occasion	Purpose
----------	---------

Grief	To let the smoke carry what is too heavy to hold alone
-------	--

Council	To speak clearly and listen deeply before decisions
---------	---

Celebration	To give thanks, to witness joy together
-------------	---

Conflict	To cool anger, to remember they are still family
----------	--

Weekly Gathering	To catch up, to be seen, to know they are not alone
------------------	---

Before Ceremony	To prepare the spirit for what comes
-----------------	--------------------------------------

18.7 Smoke Rising as Prayer

As the smoke rises, so does prayer. The smoke carries words, intentions, grief, hope – lifting them up. This is why smudging is done before speaking, before asking, before offering thanks. The smoke prepares the way.

18.8 Mechanical Effects

Situation	Effect
-----------	--------

Before a ceremony	+1 to ceremony effectiveness (the mind is clear)
-------------------	--

Before a difficult conversation	+1 to diplomacy (intention is set)
---------------------------------	------------------------------------

18.9 Individual Smudging

A person may smudge alone, in their home, at dawn or dusk. The same is true – the smoke rises, the prayer rises. This is not less powerful than group ceremony. It is simply private.

"The smoke does not ask if you are worthy. It simply rises. Your prayer rises with it. That is enough."

– Elder Wisdom

PART 19: TRIBAL FAMILY SYSTEMS (Pages 95-99 + Patch 7.1)

19.1 Core Principle

Among tribal and nomadic peoples, the family is the voice of the tribe. Not chiefs. Not elders. Families. Because kindness is learned at the hearth, at the fire, in the small moments between parent and child.

19.2 Family Reputation (Per Patch 7.1)

Each family has a reputation within the tribe. This affects how they are treated, how their word is received, and how much influence they carry.

Roll 1d6	Reputation	Effect	Wealth	Food	Special
1	Selfish	-1 to tribe loyalty,	hoards resources	1.5x wealth	Poor
(0.5x FSU) Hated by neighbors
2	Struggling	Trying but failing,	may need help	0.5x wealth	Barely surviving Refugees may be turned away
3	Neutral	No strong reputation	1.0x wealth	Adequate	–
4	Generous	+1 to trade with other families	0.8x wealth	(gave away)
Plentiful (1.5x FSU) Loved by neighbors
5	Honored	Known for kindness,	+1 to diplomacy	1.2x wealth	Plentiful +1 to diplomacy
6	Legendary	Stories told about them,	+2 to all family interactions
2.0x wealth Abundant May adopt worthy strangers

19.3 Family Loyalty

Each family has a loyalty score to the chief (0-6). This determines how willingly they follow, how much they contribute, and whether they might rebel.

Score Meaning

- 0-1 Resentful, may rebel
- 2-3 Neutral, follow but don't volunteer
- 4-5 Loyal, contribute willingly
- 6 Devoted, would die for the chief

19.4 Family Council

When the chief makes a decision that affects the whole tribe, the families have a voice:

Situation Families React

Chief decides to go to war Families with warriors in danger may object
Chief accepts refugees Families with spare food may support or resist
Chief makes trade agreement Families who produce goods are affected
Chief marries outside tribe Families lose/gain alliances
Chief fails to share scarce food Families remember
Resolution: Roll 2d6 + Chief's Reputation with Families

Roll Outcome

- 2-4 Families openly oppose. Loyalty -2, possible rebellion
- 5-7 Families grumble but comply. Loyalty -1
- 8-10 Families support. Loyalty +1
- 11-12 Families embrace decision. Loyalty +2, offer additional support

19.5 Hospitality and The Stranger

Among tribal peoples, hospitality is sacred. A stranger who comes to the fire must be fed before they are asked their name. This is not kindness – it is survival. The stranger today may be the ally tomorrow. The stranger turned away may be the enemy next season.

The Stranger at Your Fire:

When refugees arrive at a tribal camp, the families decide:

Family Reputation Response

- Selfish (1) Turn refugees away (-1 tribe loyalty, refugees remember)
- Struggling (2) Want to help but can't – send refugees to next camp
- Neutral (3) Debate. Roll family council.
- Generous (4) Accept refugees, share food (-1 FSU, +1 tribe reputation)
- Honored (5) Welcome refugees, give generously (-2 FSU, +2 reputation)
- Legendary (6) Adopt refugees as family (-3 FSU, +3 reputation, possible new family member)

PART 20: THE EIGHT TRADITIONS (Pages 99-100)

"Some men are crowned not because they lift the crown to their head, but because other men place it there and bend." The old king wore eight crowns – one for each tradition, united in a single head. When he died, they did not break. They simply returned to their eight peoples. Now they wait for someone who can gather them again.

PART 21: CROWN OF BLOOD – CENTRAL PLAINS (Pages 100-102 + Patch 7.4)

21.1 Kingship Triggers

A claimant may be recognized as War King if they:

Win 3+ major battles in the Central Plains

Defeat the previous War King in battle

Command the loyalty of 5+ great houses of the Plains

21.2 The Iron Seat

The throne of the Central Plains is called the Iron Seat. It has killed more kings than age – not through treachery, but through the simple truth that those who sit in it must be strong enough to hold it. Every king knows: the Seat remembers. It does not miss them when they fall.

21.3 War King Legitimacy Track

Battles Won Legitimacy Score

- 1 1 (aspirant)
- 2 2 (contender)
- 3 3 (recognized in home region)
- 4 4 (known abroad)
- 5+ 5 (undeniable)

21.4 Challenge Mechanics

Any lord with an equal or greater War King score may challenge the sitting king. The challenge must be public. Refusal is seen as weakness and reduces Opinion by -2 with all houses. If the challenge is accepted, the two armies meet – or the two kings meet in single combat, if both agree.

21.5 No Inheritance

Children do not inherit the War Kingship. They must win it themselves. A son of a king starts with +1 Reputation (his name is known) but no automatic claim.

21.6 The Iron Seat's Domain (Per Patch 7.4)

The Crown of Blood does not rule the entire region – it rules the heart of it. Even the War King's direct domain is only 200 miles across. Beyond that lie march lords, border counts, and wild lands where his word is suggestion, not law.

Travel Time Across War King's Direct Domain: 2-3 weeks

PART 22: CROWN OF CONTRACTS – WESTERN RIVERS (Pages 102-104 + Patch 7.4)

22.1 Kingship Triggers

A claimant may be recognized as Charter King if they:

Secure trade agreements with 75% of major river holdings

Are elected by the River Council

Receive the signed charter of participating lords

22.2 The Toll Throne

The throne of the Western Rivers is called the Toll Throne. It was paid for grain by grain, tariff by tariff, toll by toll. Every king who sits in it knows: they have earned it. The throne expects to be earned anew each generation.

22.3 River Council Mechanics

The River Council meets when a king dies or when a claimant demands recognition. It uses the Grand Ball framework for attendance and influence. Each attending lord may vote. Voting is not by ballot but by signed charter – a lord who supports a claimant adds their name and seal to the charter.

Council Attendance Roll: 2d6 + Relations modifiers

Roll Outcome

- 2-4 Few attend (legitimacy questioned)
- 5-8 Moderate attendance
- 9-11 Nearly all attend (strong mandate)
- 12 Every lord attends (unprecedented)

22.4 Breach of Charter

If a king violates the terms of his charter (raising tolls without consent, seizing merchant goods, breaking trade agreements), any signatory lord may withdraw their support. If enough lords withdraw (more than half), the king is considered to have broken the contract and may be deposed.

22.5 Succession by Election

When a king dies, the River Council elects a new king. Any lord may be considered, regardless of blood. Merchant princes with sufficient wealth may also stand – silver speaks loudly in the rivers.

22.6 The Toll Throne's Rivers (Per Patch 7.4)

The Western Rivers region has 3 major river systems, each 300-500 miles long. A merchant traveling from the headwaters to the delta:

Downstream: 3-4 weeks

Upstream (poling/towing): 6-8 weeks

PART 23: CROWN OF ROOTS – EASTERN FORESTS (TRIBAL) (Pages 104-106 + Patch 7.4)

23.1 Kingship Triggers

A claimant may be recognized as Sachem if they:

Are chosen by the Forest Council of elders

Show signs of acceptance from the land

Are recognized by the people as one who carries their will

23.2 The Living Stool

The throne of the tribal forests is not a throne at all – it is a living stump, still growing, still rooted in the earth. The Sachem sits on it not to rule but to listen – to the land, to the people, to the ancestors who speak through the roots.

23.3 Forest Council Mechanics

The Forest Council consists of elders from each family. They do not vote – they speak until consensus emerges.

Council Size	Time to Consensus
Small tribe (3-4 families)	1-3 days
Medium tribe (5-7 families)	3-7 days
Large tribe (8+ families)	7-14 days

23.4 Walking the Land Ceremony

A claimant must walk the sacred places of the forest: ancient groves, hidden springs, places where the veil between worlds is thin. They walk alone, with only their knowledge of the land to guide them.

If they complete the walk, they return. If they do not, the forest has taken them – and they were not meant to be Sachem.

23.5 Signs of Acceptance

The land shows its acceptance through signs:

Game appears where there was none

Water flows from springs long dry

Trees bloom out of season

The wind carries whispers of approval

These are not magical – they are natural phenomena that the people interpret as signs. Whether the spirits truly speak or the people simply believe, the effect is the same.

23.6 Land's Rejection

If a Sachem acts against the forest – allowing sacred groves to be cut, permitting overhunting, ignoring the elders' counsel – the signs reverse. Game grows scarce. Springs dry. The wind carries warnings. Loyalty drops. The people begin to whisper that the Sachem has lost the land's favor.

23.7 The Living Stool's Forest (Per Patch 7.4)

The Eastern Forests are 600 miles north-south. A messenger traveling from the northern tribal camps to the southern settled hill forts:

6-8 weeks in summer

Impossible in winter (deep snow, frozen rivers)

PART 24: CROWN OF THE GREEN DRAKE – EASTERN FORESTS (SETTLED) (Pages 106-109)

24.1 The Green Drake Myth

In the oldest songs, a dragon threatened to swallow the world. A man – called the Green Drake, though he was no dragon – fought it alone. He killed it, but lost his leg in the battle.

The spirits, moved by his sacrifice, raised the Eastern Forest around him. The forest brought rivers, valleys, animals, rain, sun – the whole world came to him. When he died, leaning against a birch, his last breath became the eastern wind, which still whispers the history of the people to those who listen and believe. "The wind is his breath. The forest is his gift. We are his children. This is not a story. This is truth."

24.2 Kingship Triggers

A claimant may be recognized as Lord of the High Mound if they:

Carry the blood of the Green Drake (can be traced, however distantly)

Prove skill with the bow in the Great Hunt

Are whispered of by the wind (high reputation among the folk)

24.3 The Three Signs

Sign	Evidence	Requirement
Blood	Descent from the Green Drake	Can be traced, even distantly
Bow	Proven hunting skill	Must have taken a great beast in fair chase
Whisper	The wind speaks of you	Reputation ≥ 6 , Opinion $\geq +2$ across multiple forest lords

24.4 Hill Forts as Seats

The settled folk do not rule from caves or stumps. They build hill forts – earth and timber, ditches and banks, placed on high ground where the wind speaks loudest. A hill fort is not just a home; it is an ear to the whispers.

Hill Fort Upgrades:

Upgrade	Cost (SD)	Time	Effect
The High Mound	200 SD	1 year	+1 to all ceremonial rolls
The Bowyer's Grove	150 SD	6 months	+1 to hunting, can train elite archers
The Hunting Lodge	100 SD	3 months	+1 to hunting, young lords train faster

24.5 The Great Hunt

When a king dies, the claimants hunt. They enter the forest alone, with only their bow and their skill. They hunt for three days. The one who returns with the greatest kill, who shows the most respect to the animal's spirit, who the folk see as worthy – he becomes king.

Hunt Result Outcome

No kill	Not worthy – cannot be king
Small game (rabbit, fowl)	Minimal respect, unlikely to win
Medium game (deer, boar)	Respectable, possible contender
Great beast (stag, bear, wolf)	Strong claim

24.6 The Whisper Test

Before a king is confirmed, he must spend a night alone at the Green Drake's Birch (where the first forest grew). He must listen to the wind. If he hears nothing, he is not ready. If he hears only his own fears, he is not worthy. If he hears the whispers of his ancestors, of the Green Drake himself, he may return and be crowned.

24.7 Relations with Tribal Folk

The settled and tribal peoples of the forest have traded, fought, and intermarried for centuries. They know each other.

Relation	Opinion Modifier
----------	------------------

Trade partners	+2 base
----------------	---------

Intermarried families	+3 base
-----------------------	---------

Recent conflict	-2 for 1 generation
-----------------	---------------------

Shared ceremony attendance	+1 for 1 year
----------------------------	---------------

PART 25: CROWN OF STONE – SOUTHERN MOUNTAINS (Pages 109-111 + Patch 7.4)

25.1 Kingship Triggers

A claimant may be recognized as Blood King only through direct bloodline inheritance. The crown passes from father to son, mother to daughter, generation to generation.

25.2 The Stone Seat

The throne of the Southern Mountains is carved from the mountain itself. It has never been moved. It has waited for the right blood to sit in it for longer than any can remember. It can wait again.

25.3 Ancestor Recognition

A new king must visit the ancestral tombs carved into the mountain's heart. They walk among the bones of those who came before. If the ancestors accept them, they feel... something. A presence. A peace. If the ancestors reject them, the mountain feels empty, cold, unwelcoming.

25.4 Blood Purity

The mountain folk track blood purity – how closely related a claimant is to the previous kings. This is not about racism; it is about tradition. The mountain remembers names, not faces.

Relation	Purity Score
----------	--------------

Direct child	10
--------------	----

Grandchild	8
------------	---

Sibling	7
---------	---

Niece/nephew	5
--------------	---

Distant relation	3
------------------	---

A claimant with purity score 5+ is considered "of the blood." Below that, they are considered outsiders and cannot inherit – they must conquer.

25.5 Usurper Mechanics

Someone not of the blood can only rule by conquest. They may take the Stone Seat by force, but they will never have full legitimacy. They suffer:

-2 Opinion from all mountain houses

Constant rebellion risk

No inheritance – their children are not considered blood

25.6 The Stone Seat's Mountains (Per Patch 7.4)

The Southern Mountains are a labyrinth of ranges and valleys. A lord traveling from one end of the region to the other:

Using known passes: 6-8 weeks

Exploring new routes: 3-4 months, with high risk

PART 26: CROWN OF THE NORTH WIND – NORTHERN SNOWLANDS (Per Patch 34.0/35.0 – Scottish Clans & Norman Lords)

26.1 Cultural Identity

The northern lords are a unique mixture:

Highland clan roots (fierce family loyalty, blood feuds that last generations)

Norman conqueror pragmatism (they took this land by the sword and they hold it by the sword, but they also administer it, build on it, rule it)

They are welcoming but judging. A northern lord will share his fire, his food, his ale with any traveler. He will also watch you all night to see if you're worth the warmth.

26.2 Kingship Triggers

A claimant may be recognized as Lord of the High Seat if they satisfy at least two of the Threefold Right:

Right Evidence

Blood Claim to the line (even distant)

Steel 3+ major victories OR conquest of key holding

Word No proven oathbreaking; at least one major oath kept at personal cost

26.3 The High Seat

The throne of the northern snowlands is not a throne. It is the highest chair in the great hall – often just a larger version of every other chair, placed on a slight rise in the floor. The king sits there because everyone else chooses to sit lower.

When a king dies, the chair remains empty until the Gathering chooses a new king. The lords sit in a circle around it, facing each other.

26.4 The Gathering

When a king dies, the lords come to the High Seat. There is no fixed schedule – they come when they can.

Step Description

The Speaking Each lord speaks what they know of the claimants. Truth is expected.

The Standing Claimants stand and give their word – what they will protect, what they will sacrifice.

The Choosing Lords step forward and stand behind the one they choose.

The Acclamation The claimant with the most lords behind them is king.

26.5 Northern Speech

A Northerner Says... A Southerner Hears... What It Actually Means

"That's a bold plan." "He approves." "That plan might kill us all, but I'm willing to watch."

"You talk well." "He respects my eloquence." "You talk too much. Show me what you can do."

"Sit by the fire." "He welcomes me." "I'm watching you. The fire makes it easier."

"We'll see." "He's considering it." "No. But I have reasons for not saying no directly."

(Silence) "He has nothing to say." "I have much to say. None of it is for your ears."

26.6 Strategic Silence

Northern lords are not fools. They know when truth serves and when it endangers. If their child is a ward in a southern court, they will smile at insults, nod at foolishness, and wait. They will not trade their child's safety for the satisfaction of being right.

26.7 The Ward's Silence

When a northern lord has a child serving as ward in another lord's court:

Situation Expected Response Mechanical Effect

Insult at court Smile, nod, say nothing +1 to Patience (tracked internally)

Child treated poorly Observe, document, wait -1 Opinion (hidden), +2 to future vengeance

Child endangered Immediate action, silence broken Risk of feud, but child comes first

Wardship ends Lord collects child, rides north All stored insults available for response

26.8 Survival is the Only Law

A king who cannot keep his people alive through winter has no right to rule. Full stop. This is not spoken – it is known. When a king fails, the lords do not vote him out. They simply stop coming when he calls.

26.9 The High Seat's Snowlands (Per Patch 7.4)

The Northern Snowlands are the most sparsely populated. A journey from Harald's Hold in the west to the eastern fishing villages:

Summer: 5-6 weeks

Winter: 3-4 months (if possible at all)

PART 27: THE FELT CROWN – NOMAD STEPPE (TRADITIONAL) (Pages 115-117)

27.1 Kingship Triggers

A claimant may be recognized as Khan if they:

Unite 75%+ of steppe clans as vassals

Are confirmed by Kurultai

Are lifted on the felt by clan chiefs

27.2 The Felt Crown

The crown of the steppe is not gold or stone – it is a felt blanket. When the clan chiefs lift you on the felt, they are not crowning you. They are saying: "You are light enough to carry. Now carry us."

A Khan who forgets this becomes heavy. Heavy Khans fall.

27.3 Kurultai Confirmation

The Kurultai is a gathering of all clan chiefs at a sacred ground. They debate, they argue, they drink fermented mare's milk, and eventually they decide. The claimant must have the support of at least two-thirds of the chiefs to be confirmed.

Kurultai Outcome Result

Unanimous support Khan's authority unchallenged, +2 Loyalty all clans

Two-thirds support Khan confirmed, but opposition clans resentful (-1 Loyalty)

Bare majority Khan confirmed but weak, constant challenges

27.4 Mobile Throne

A Khan does not sit on a throne. They sit on a horse. The throne moves. The Khan's authority travels with the Orda (royal camp), which moves with the seasons, with the herds, with the grass.

27.5 Succession by Kurultai

When a Khan dies, the Kurultai gathers again. Blood matters, but so does ability. A son may be chosen – or a brother, a cousin, a completely different clan chief if he has proven himself worthy. The chiefs choose the one most likely to keep the horde united.

PART 28: THE SETTLED CROWN – NOMAD STEPPE (TRANSFORMED) (Pages 117-120)

28.1 Transformation Trigger

A Khan may begin the transformation to settled rule if they:

Control at least one city or castle for 5+ years

Establish a permanent capital

Begin using settled administration

28.2 Cultural Conversion Stages

Stage	Time	Effect	Resistance
Conquest	Year 1	Khan rules settled land but lives in Orda	High (clans suspicious)
Tribute	Year 2-3	Khan collects taxes, uses scribes	Moderate
Integration	Year 4-5	Khan's children educated both ways	Low
Transformation	Year 6+	Khan holds both titles, rules from palace	Minimal

28.3 Conversion Tools

Tool	Mechanics	Cultural Impact
Economic Ties	Trade agreements, tribute	Settled goods become desirable
Political Marriage	Marriage alliances	Families blend, loyalties blur
Religious Syncretism	Blend faiths	Spiritual unity, less resistance

28.4 The Cost of Transformation

Loss Effect

Traditionalist clans break away -X loyalty, possible rebellion
Steppe identity dilutes Future generations may not remember the old ways
Settled lords still suspicious Never fully trusted by either world
The Felt Crown feels heavier Khan now carries two peoples, not one

28.5 What They Become

Region	Title for Transformed Khan	Meaning
Central Plains	"The Horse Lord"	Respectful, wary – he came on a horse, now he stays
Western Rivers	"The Tribute Khan"	Mercantile – he collects taxes now, like us
Eastern Forests	"The Two-Path One"	Curious – he walks both ways
Southern Mountains	"The Usurper"	Dismissive – no blood, no crown
Northern Snowlands	"The Survivor"	Practical – he adapted. We respect that.
Steppe (traditionalists)	"The Lost One"	Tragic – he forgot the grass

PART 29: THE RUBICON CROWN – ARMY PROCLAMATION (Pages 120-123)

29.1 Core Principle

This is the moment when an army, through a combination of loyalty, victories, charismatic leadership, and careful nudges, decides to proclaim their commander king – regardless of what any other lord, council, or tradition says.

29.2 The Rubicon Threshold

An army does not proclaim a king lightly. They must be ready:

Factor	Requirement	Contribution
Loyalty	Average commander loyalty ≥ 4	+1 per point above 3
Victories	5+ major battles won	+1 per 2 victories
Morale	Army morale "Exalted" for 3+ weeks	+1 per week
Banner Tier	Commander's personal banner Tier 4+	+2
Reputation	Commander's reputation ≥ 7	+2
War Will	Army War Will ≥ 8	+1
Shared Sacrifice	Army has endured a near-disaster together	+2 (once)
The Whisper	Leader has planted the thought	+1 to +3
The Rubicon Score = Sum of all factors.
Threshold: 12+

29.3 The Whisper – Planting the Thought

A leader who wants to be proclaimed king cannot simply ask. They must plant the thought:

Technique	Effect
Victory Speeches over multiple battles	+1
Leading from the front, sharing hardship	+1
Talking of "what comes after"	+1
"When I am king..." in private conversations	+1

29.4 The Crossing – Moment of Proclamation

When the Rubicon Score reaches 12, the moment can happen. The leader may choose to let it happen or suppress it.

If the leader does nothing: The army acts. Roll 2d6

Roll The Proclamation

2-4 Hesitant – "Some of us have been talking..."

5-8 Firm – "The men have decided. You are our king."

9-11 Overwhelming – Entire army shouts as one

12 Legendary – They crown you on the spot with whatever is at hand

If the leader refuses: Roll 2d6 + Rubicon Score

Roll Outcome

≤ 8 They accept. But something breaks. -2 Loyalty

9-11 They argue. Loyalty split.

12+ They refuse your refusal. "You are our king whether you will it or not."

29.5 Aftermath

Change Effect

All proclaiming units Loyalty becomes 6 (fanatic) permanently

Morale +2 Morale for all proclaiming units

Recruitment +1d6x10 recruits per season

Reputation +3 Reputation, possible new nickname

Other lords Opinion -2 with all non-proclaiming lords

Other kings Relations drop to -3 (rival claimants)

Former liege If any, they are now enemy

29.6 The Rubicon King's Legitimacy

A Rubicon King has no legitimacy by any traditional crown. Their authority rests on:

The army that proclaimed them

Fear (other lords may bend to avoid being crushed)

Time (if they rule long enough, people forget how it started)

Marriage into a legitimate line

Conquest of a capital (adds Crown of Blood)

Recognition by an existing king

PART 30: THE BENDING (Pages 123-125 + Patch 7.3)

30.1 The Bend Defined

The Bend is the formal act of swearing fealty to a regional king. It is both ceremony and substance – a lord kneels, speaks his oath, and rises a vassal.

30.2 Bending Triggers

A lord may choose to bend when:

Opinion of the king ≥ +2

Fear (army at gates, no hope of victory)

Mutual benefit (trade, protection, alliance)

30.3 Public Ceremony

The bending ceremony is a public act. The lord kneels, places his hands between the king's hands, and speaks the oath:

"I, [name] of [house], do swear fealty to [king name], King of [crown]. I shall be his man, in winter and summer, in war and peace, in life and death. This I swear by my sword, my land, and the honor of my house. So hear me."

30.4 Reluctant Bend

If a lord bends only out of fear, the oath may be spoken through clenched teeth. The king knows. The crowd knows. The lord knows. But the knee is bent, and the oath is spoken. That is enough – for now.

Mechanical Effect: Loyalty starts at 1 instead of 3. Must be earned.

30.5 Broken Bend

If a vassal rebels, they are said to have "broken their bend." This carries:

-3 Reputation (oathbreaker)

Former liege gains Claim

All other lords -1 Opinion (if you'll betray him, you'll betray me)

30.6 Multiple Bends

A lord may bend to multiple kings? No. This is not recognized. A lord who tries to serve two kings serves none. Any king who discovers a vassal has bent elsewhere may:

Demand they renounce the other

Seize lands

Declare war

30.7 The Feudal Web at Game Start (Per Patch 7.3)

At campaign start, the feudal web looks like this:

text

Level 0: THE EMPTY THRONE

- 16 Great Lords (sworn to crown, now independent in practice)
 - 80 Minor Lords (sworn to Great Lords)
 - 148 Landed Knights (sworn to Minor Lords)
(indirectly, also sworn to Great Lords)
 - 192 Landed Knights (directly sworn to Great Lords)
- 27 Independent Minor Lords (sworn to no Great Lord)
 - 148 Landed Knights (sworn to Independent Minor Lords)
(these Minor Lords owe fealty only to the Empty Throne)

Total Oaths:

16 Great Lords (theoretically sworn to crown)

107 Minor Lords (80 vassal + 27 independent)

340 Landed Knights (148 + 192)

463 total noble characters with defined liege relationships

PART 31: THE EMPTY THRONE (Pages 125-127)

31.1 The Old King's Crown

The last king to wear all eight crowns died thirty years ago. He was old, wise, and loved. When he passed, his children had predeceased him, his nephews were distant, and his cousins were many. No one could agree who should rule. So no one ruled.

The eight crowns returned to their eight peoples. The throne sat empty. The realm learned to live without a king.

31.2 The Hidden Heir

Some say a daughter survived. Hidden away in the mountains, raised in secret by those who remembered what loyalty meant. A girl with the old king's eyes, they whisper. A woman now, waiting.

Others say she died with the rest. That the line is truly broken. That the throne will never be filled again.

Both cannot be true. Both might be lies. The truth waits in the Southern Mountains, in a fortress no map shows, guarded by knights who have kept their oath for thirty years.

31.3 The Great Reconciliation

If all eight crowns are gathered on one head, the Empty Throne is filled. The one who wears them may call themselves High King – but only if:

They hold all eight crowns

They are recognized by at least half the great houses of each region

They can defend the throne against all challengers

This has not happened since the old king died. It may never happen again.

PART 36: MOUNTED COMBAT (Per Patch 7.8)

36.1 Core Rule

All horse bonuses work on failed d6s (dice that miss the enemy's Armor Class). A reroll:

May only be used once per die

Uses the new result

Represents speed, height, and shock impact

36.2 Complete Mount Cost Table

Requirements:

Breeding stock (at least 1 stallion and 5 mares of the desired type)

Pasture land (1 acre per horse)

Experienced horse masters

No warfare during breeding season (stress reduces success)

PART 37: UNIT TIER UPGRADE SYSTEM (Pages 136-138)

37.1 Core Rule

Trigger: The moment a unit satisfies the Tier requirement...

Resolution: Immediately resolve the Tier Upgrade before the next action, scene, or battle round. Tiering does not require:

Player choice

Commander approval

Rest

Narrative justification

Growth interrupts the war.

37.2 Tier Requirements

Upgrade Requirement

1 → 2 Unit survives 3 battles

2 → 3 Unit survives 6 battles

3 → 4 Unit survives 10 battles

4 → 5 Unit survives 15 battles

"Survives" = not reduced to 0 people.

37.3 Tier Benefits

Tier Benefits

Tier 2 +1 Initiative, Morale DC -1

Tier 3 +1 Weapon Die (permanent), +1 Loyalty bonus to allied commanders

Tier 4 +1 Armor Class, Morale DC -1

Tier 5 Choose one (locked permanently): +1d6 on all attacks / Immune to first Morale check / +1 AC while Defending

PART 38: BANNER TIER UPGRADE TREE (Pages 138-139)

38.1 Core Rule

Banners represent reputation, not survival.

Trigger: The moment a banner satisfies the Tier requirement...

Resolution: Immediately upgrade the banner. No delay. No choice to refuse.

38.2 Banner Tier Requirements

Upgrade Requirement

1 → 2 Unit wins 1 battle

2 → 3 Unit wins 3 battles

Tier 5 Legendary: Choose one (locked permanently): Banner effect always on / Allied commanders auto-accept Aid requests / Immune to Retreat unless half strength

38.4 Auto-Trigger Clause

After each of the following events, check Tier requirements:

End of battle

End of round if battle ends

Unit creation

Banner assignment

If met – Tier immediately resolves.

PART 39: COMMAND CAPACITY – EXPANDED (Pages 139-142)

39.1 Core Principle

A commander's ability to lead is not merely a matter of logistics – it is a matter of presence, reputation, and the loyalty they inspire. A great name can rally thousands where a lesser lord could barely hold a hundred. Command Capacity represents how many soldiers a commander can effectively control in battle. Exceed this limit, and even the greatest lord will find their orders lost in the chaos.

39.2 Base Command Capacity

Each commander can effectively control troops based on their personal Tier:

Commander Tier Base Capacity

Tier 1 100 troops

Tier 2 250 troops

Tier 3 500 troops

Tier 4 1,000 troops

Tier 5 2,000 troops

39.3 Banner Tier Multiplier

A commander's Banner Tier multiplies their Base Capacity, representing the renown and recognition that draws soldiers to follow their banner:

Banner Tier Capacity Multiplier

Tier 1 Banner x1 (no multiplier)

Tier 2 Banner x1.5 (round up)

Tier 3 Banner x2

Tier 4 Banner x3

Tier 5 Banner x4

39.4 Final Command Capacity Formula

text

Final Command Capacity = Base Capacity × Banner Multiplier

Examples:

Commander Tier	Banner Tier	Base Capacity	Multiplier	Final Capacity
Tier 1	Tier 1	100 x1	100 troops
Tier 2	Tier 2	250 x1.5	375 troops
Tier 3	Tier 3	500 x2	1,000 troops
Tier 3	Tier 4	500 x3	1,500 troops
Tier 4	Tier 3	1,000 x2	2,000 troops
Tier 4	Tier 4	1,000 x3	3,000 troops
Tier 5	Tier 5	2,000 x4	8,000 troops

39.5 Command Capacity by Tier (Quick Reference Table)

Commander Tier	Banner Tier 1	Banner Tier 2	Banner Tier 3	Banner Tier 4	Banner Tier 5
Tier 1	100	150	200	300	400
Tier 2	250	375	500	750	1,000
Tier 3	500	750	1,000	1,500	2,000
Tier 4	1,000	1,500	2,000	3,000	4,000
Tier 5	2,000	3,000	4,000	6,000	8,000

39.6 Effects of Exceeding Command Capacity

If a commander leads more troops than their Command Capacity:

Excess Percentage Penalty

1-25% over -1 to morale checks, -1 to battle maneuver rolls
 26-50% over -2 to morale checks, -2 to battle maneuver rolls, orders delayed
 51-75% over -3 to morale checks, cannot use special tactics, desertion risk
 76%+ over Automatic morale failure, unit may refuse orders, chaos in ranks

39.7 Multiple Units Under One Commander

A commander's capacity applies to ALL units under their direct command in a battle. They may split their capacity across multiple units.

39.8 Increasing Command Capacity

Method Effect

Increasing Commander Tier Increases Base Capacity

Increasing Banner Tier Increases Multiplier

Legendary Reputation (8+) +10% to final capacity (stacks)

War Hero status +5% to final capacity

PART 40: RECRUITMENT & RETINUE GROWTH (Per Patch 6.1, 7.7, 7.11)

40.1 Core Principle

The player does not "buy units." They attract commanders and build forces through reputation, loyalty, and deeds.

40.2 Commander Recruitment Check

When attempting to recruit a commander: Roll 1d6. Base DC = 4.

Condition Modifier

Player has Tier 3+ unit -1 DC

Player has Banner Tier 3+ -1 DC

Offering pay above market -1 DC

Player recently lost a battle +1 DC

Commander is famous +1 DC

If roll $\geq$ DC – commander joins.

If roll $<$ DC – refuses (may retry after a battle).

40.3 New Commander Generation

When a commander is recruited, generate:

Banner (use Banner Generation system)

Weapon (roll or choose)

Armor (roll or choose)

40.4 Loyalty System

Base Loyalty: Starts at 0.

Action	Effect
Unit survived battle	+1 Loyalty
Commander aided another	+1 Loyalty
Commander was abandoned	-1 Loyalty
Commander's unit destroyed	-2 Loyalty
Commander's banner captured	-3 Loyalty
Commander's Fear triggered	Apply modifier

Loyalty	Effect
+3 or higher	Aid auto-accepted
-2 or lower	Commander may defect

Loyalty Check Table: Roll 1d6 when defection risk triggered:

Roll Result

1-2 Commander defects immediately

3-4 Commander demands terms

5-6 Holds together

40.5 Camp Phase Actions

After battle, player may choose ONE per commander:

Recruit replacements

Train (+1 Initiative next battle)

Fortify (+1 AC next battle)

Scout (+1 Terrain bonus next battle)

Drill Morale (ignore first Morale check)

40.6 The Equipment Reality – Nothing Spawns (Per Patch 7.7)

A lord cannot simply say "I equip 100 men with plate armor" and deduct coin from treasury. Plate armor must exist in the world. It must be:

Crafted in a holding with appropriate facilities

Purchased from a holding that has it in stock

Looted from a defeated enemy

Inherited from previous generations

Received as tribute or gift

The Golden Rule: If it isn't in a holding's inventory, it isn't available for purchase.

40.13 Mercenary Bands as Persistent Factions (Per Patch 7.11)

Mercenary bands are not temporary units. They are persistent factions that exist in the world whether hired or not. They have:

A name and reputation

A commander with personality and ambitions

A core strength (number of veterans)

A home base or region of operation

A treasury (their own money)

A contract history (who they've fought for)

A grudge list (who wronged them)

40.14 Mercenary Band Generation Table

5	Cruel	4		Enjoys violence, may commit atrocities
6	Loyal	6		Once hired, hard to lose

40.15 Mercenary Loyalty & Satisfaction

Mercenaries have a Satisfaction Score (1-10) that determines if they will:

Renew their contract

Fight effectively

Abandon you in battle

Switch sides for better pay

Base Satisfaction = 5 + (Pay Quality) + (Casualty Modifier) + (Historical Modifier)

Factor	Modifier
Pay is fair (market rate)	+1
Pay is generous (+25% above market)	+2
Pay is low (-25% below market)	-2
Pay is insulting (-50% below)	-4
Light casualties (<10% in last battle)	+1
Moderate casualties (10-25%)	0
Heavy casualties (25-50%)	-2
Devastating casualties (>50%)	-4
Promised bonus paid	+2
Promised bonus withheld	-4
Commander treated well	+1
Commander treated poorly	-2
Previous positive history	+1 per job
Previous negative history	-2 per grudge

Satisfaction Thresholds:

Score Behavior

9-10 Fanatically loyal – will fight to the death, accept lower pay next time

7-8 Satisfied – fight well, likely to renew

5-6 Neutral – do the job, no more

3-4 Unhappy – may demand renegotiation, fight poorly (-1 morale)

1-2 Angry – looking for excuse to leave, may desert

0 or less Betrayal – will switch sides for any offer, may loot your lands on way out

PART 41: UNIVERSAL RECRUITMENT (Per Patch 6.1, 7.7)

41.1 Core Principle

Anyone can recruit fighters. Training and equipment determine effectiveness. Recruitment gathers people, while arming them costs silver.

41.2 Recruitment Sources

All recruitment draws from people physically present. Recruitment Pool = Local Free Men + Armed Refugees

41.3 Refugee Militia Unit

Refugee fighters are functional but weak. Typical traits:

Poor Equipment

Low Morale

Untrained

They can still fight, raid, or defend settlements

41.4 Recruitment Rule

Once armed, refugees join the recruitment pool as fighters.

Unarmed Refugees → pay silver → Armed Refugees → Recruitable

41.5 Landless Recruitment

Landless characters recruit from the local recruitment pool.

41.6 Weekly Replenishment

Units replace losses from the same recruitment pool.

Weekly Replenishment Limit: 10 soldiers per unit

41.7 Refugee Creation

Refugees are created when regions destabilize. Possible causes:

Settlement destroyed

Army defeated

Occupation

Famine

41.8 Strategic Tradeoff

Arming refugees costs silver but expands manpower.

Example decision:

Spend 60 silver → build trade caravan

OR Spend 60 silver → arm 20 refugees

Players must choose between economy or manpower.

41.9 The Equipment Check (Per Patch 7.7)

Before a unit can be recruited, the player must:

Check Inventory: Does the holding have the required weapons and armor?

If Yes: Proceed with recruitment, remove items from inventory

If No: Either:

Choose different equipment (if available)

Wait for items to be crafted or imported

Send caravan to acquire items elsewhere

Recruit fewer soldiers (only as many as can be equipped)

Example:

Lord wants to recruit 100 soldiers with swords and chain.

Holding inventory: 45 swords, 30 chain suits

Can equip: 30 soldiers now

Must acquire: 70 more swords, 70 more chain suits

Options: Craft (weeks), Import (weeks), or recruit in phases

41.10 Phased Recruitment

A lord may recruit in phases as equipment becomes available.

Week Action

Week 1 Craft 20 swords, 20 chain suits → equip 20 soldiers
Week 2 Craft 20 more swords, 20 more chain suits → equip 20 more
Week 3 Caravan arrives with 30 swords, 30 chain suits → equip final 60
Week 4 Unit of 100 soldiers fully formed
Total time: 1 month from decision to fielding

41.11 Material Sourcing (Artificer)

Method	How It Works	Risk/Reward
Buy Locally	Purchase from holding inventory	Reliable, may be expensive
Trade with Caravans	Order through merchants	Can get rare materials, takes time
Mine Yourself	Spend time gathering	Free materials, time-consuming
Barter	Trade finished items for materials	Good for building relationships
Salvage	Buy battlefield scrap cheap	Low quality, needs refining
Commission Runners	Hire people to fetch specific materials	Costly but fast

PART 42: COMMANDER AI & PERSONALITY (Per Patch 7.11)

42.1 Core Rule

Every commander has:

Temperament (how they fight)

Priority (what they value)

Fear (what breaks them)

These three traits determine:

Action choice

Aid decisions

Retreat behavior

Loyalty shifts

42.2 Temperament (Roll 1d6)

Roll	Temperament
1	Aggressive – Prefers Charge or Keep Attacking
2	Disciplined – Follows orders, prefers Defend
3	Cunning – Prefers Traps and terrain
4	Loyal – Mirrors allied actions
5	Proud – Never retreats first
6	Wary – Prefers Defend and Rearguard

42.3 Priority (Roll 1d6)

Roll	Priority	Effect
1	Glory	+1 Loyalty when charging
2	Survival	-1 Morale DC for own unit
3	Wealth	+1 loot result
4	Victory	+1d6 when Requesting Aid
5	Orders	+1 Initiative if following plan
6	Banner	Banner tiers up 1 battle faster

42.4 Fear (Roll 1d6)

Roll	Fear Trigger
1	Fire – -1 Initiative vs fire/traps
2	Cavalry – -1d6 vs mounted units
3	Encirclement – Must test morale if flanked
4	Loss – Tests morale when ally dies
5	Dishonor – Must test morale if oath broken
6	Darkness – -1 Initiative at night

42.5 Action Selection (AI)

At start of each round, determine battlefield state:

Outnumbered?

At half strength?

Terrain advantage?

Ally retreating?

Apply personality to determine action.

42.6 Aid Response Logic

When asked for Aid: Roll Loyalty Check (1d6 vs DC 4)

Condition	Modifier
Same Temperament	+1
Ally helped before	+1
Banner Tier 3+	+1
Fear triggered	-1

42.7 Personality Evolution

After each battle: Roll 1d6

Roll	Change
1-2	No change
3-4	Gain new Fear
5	Temperament shifts
6	Priority shifts

42.8 Mercenary Loyalty Integration (Per Patch 7.11)

Mercenaries have additional loyalty factors:

Pay status

Contract terms

Loot share

Treatment by employer

(Use Satisfaction Score from 40.15)

42.9 Battlefield Morale for Mercenaries

Situation	Morale Modifier
Pay is current	+0
Pay is late	-2
Pay is 1 month overdue	-4 (may refuse orders)
Satisfaction 7+	+1
Satisfaction 3-4	-1
Satisfaction 1-2	-2
Fighting alongside regulars who disrespect them	-1
Fighting alongside regulars who treat them as equals	+1
Enemy has offered them more (they know)	-3

PART 43: COMMANDER MORTALITY & ROTATION (Page 160)

Commanders track:

Age (years)

Wounds (accumulated injuries)

Loyalty (current)

Fatigue (campaign exhaustion)

Older commanders gradually retire, die, or become advisors.

PART 44: COMMANDER CAPTURE SYSTEM (Pages 161-163 + Per Patch 12.0)

44.1 Step 1 – Determine How the Battle Ended

For each enemy unit that had a commander, identify its final state:

Surrendered

Routed

Destroyed

44.2 If the Enemy Surrenders

If an enemy army or unit formally surrenders:

All surviving commanders are captured

The enemy lord is captured if present

44.3 If a Unit Routes

For each routed unit's commander, resolve fate by battlefield reality:

They are captured if:

Their unit was surrounded

Their retreat path was cut

They were on foot with no escort

Friendly lines collapsed behind them

They escape if:

They had a clear retreat path

They withdrew early

They were mounted with escort

Friendly forces covered their retreat

No dice are rolled. Outcome is determined by positioning, terrain, and collapse pattern.

44.4 If a Unit is Destroyed

When a unit is completely destroyed: Roll 1d2 for that unit's commander.

Roll Outcome

1 KILLED IN THE FIGHT – Commander dies during final moments

2 CAPTURED AMONG THE DEAD – Commander survives but is overrun

44.5 Big Battle Rule

In a major battle where the enemy line fully collapses, their banner falls, and command structure breaks:

Assume maximum plausible capture:

Any commander who did not explicitly escape

Any noble who did not retreat earlier
...is captured.

44.6 The Knight's Value (Per Patch 12.0)

A knight is not a common soldier. He is:

A noble

Worth 50-600 SD in ransom

Connected to powerful families

A potential source of intelligence

A political hostage

Default Battlefield Outcome for Knights:

80% captured (if defeated)

15% ransomed on the spot (pay and release)

5% killed (accident, feud, cruelty)

Common soldiers: Still die in droves. Knights are different.

PART 45: COMMANDER & NOBLE VALUE SYSTEM (Pages 163-165 + Per Patch 12.0)

45.1 Commander Value by Tier

Tier	Soldiers	Type	Ransom Value	Personal SD
1	1-19	Low (militia, scouts)	50	20-50
2	20-49	Standard (infantry)	100	60-100
3	50-100	Elite (veterans)	200	100-200
4	100-200	High (noble commander)	400	200-350
5	200-400	Royal/Sacred	600	300-500

45.2 Noble Classification

Group	Base Ransom	Personal SD
Main Family	600	300-500
Land Lord	400	200-350
Branch Family	250	120-200

45.3 Combined Value Rule

If a captured character is both a commander AND a noble, use the higher of the two values, not both.

45.4 Payment Check

To see if ransom is paid, check:

Does the House have enough Silverdew?

Is this person politically worth saving?

Will refusing payment cause instability?

If yes – ransom is paid

If no – they remain prisoner / are exchanged / are executed

45.5 Failure to Pay

If ransom is refused or impossible, the captor may:

Execute

Imprison

Exchange

Maim

Parade

Sell

Each choice creates rumors, fear, reputation shifts, religious responses, and loyalty changes.

45.6 Knightly Value Table (Per Patch 12.0 – Revised)

Type	Ransom Value	Personal SD	Political Value
Landed Knight (Tier 1-2)	100-200 SD	20-50 SD	Minor house, local
Banneret (Tier 2-3)	200-400 SD	50-100 SD	Known regionally
Minor Lord (Tier 3-4)	400-800 SD	100-200 SD	Major house, regional
Great Lord (Tier 5-6)	1,000-3,000 SD	200-500 SD	One of the great houses
Royal Blood	3,000-10,000 SD	500-2,000 SD	Kingdom-changing

45.7 Ransom Expectations

Outcome	Reputation Effect	Future Relations
Full ransom immediately	+1 Reputation (honorable)	+1 Opinion with house
Negotiated lower	0 Reputation	0 Opinion change

Prisoner released without ransom	+3 Reputation (generous)	+3 Opinion, possible alliance
Prisoner executed	-3 Reputation (cruel)	Blood feud
Prisoner ransomed but cheated	-2 Reputation	-3 Opinion, future treachery

45.8 Capture Resolution (2d6)

When a knight's unit is defeated, roll 2d6 on the Capture Table:

2d6	Result	Outcome
2-3	Killed	Dead in battle. Family may demand blood price.
4-5	Wounded, captured	-1 to ransom value (needs healing)
6-8	Captured	Standard ransom value
9-10	Ransomed on field	Pays 50% value immediately, released
11-12	Escaped	Fled battlefield, may return later

Modifiers:

Condition	Modifier
Knight fought personally	+1
Knight's side lost badly	-1
Victor is known as cruel	-2
Victor is known as honorable	+1
Blood feud between houses	-3
Allied houses	+2

45.9 Mass Capture

In a major battle where one side routs, use the Mass Capture Table:

% of Enemy Knights	Fate
60%	Captured
20%	Killed
10%	Escaped
10%	Ransomed on field

Apply to all knights on losing side.

45.10 Ransom Negotiation

Ransom Negotiation Roll: 1d6 + Reputation + Relationship

Modifier	Amount
Victor's Reputation	+1 per 10 points
Captive's Reputation	+1 per 10 points (they're worth more)
Opinion between houses	+1 if +2 or higher
Blood feud	-4
Previous ransoms honored	+2
Captive is heir	+2 to ransom value
Captive is only heir	+4 to ransom value

Result determines final ransom % of base value:

Roll	% of Base Value
1-3	150%
4-6	125%
7-9	100%
10-11	75%
12+	50%

45.11 Prisoner Exchange

Instead of ransom, knights can be exchanged:

Exchange Rate	Value
---------------	-------

1 knight for 1 knight of equal rank	Standard
-------------------------------------	----------

1 great lord for 2 minor lords	Acceptable
--------------------------------	------------

1 heir for 1 heir	Common
-------------------	--------

10 common soldiers for 1 knight	Insulting (-2 Opinion)
---------------------------------	------------------------

Exchange Negotiation: Use same table as ransom, but for "value matching"

PART 46: BATTLEFIELD INTERVENTION SYSTEM (Pages 165-167)

46.1 Core Rule

When the player character encounters an ongoing battle, the system must ask:

Do you:

Observe fully

Position your forces

Join a side now?

46.2 Option 1 – Observe Fully

The player chooses to watch the battle resolve without interference.

Effect:

Battle runs to completion

No player input

No loot (observer rule)

Political knowledge gained

Reputation formed

Player may react after

46.3 Option 2 – Position Forces

The player does not join the battle immediately. Instead, they declare where their units are placed around the battlefield.

Valid positions:

Enemy rear

Ally flank

High ground

Road

River crossing

Retreat path

Camp

Supply wagons

Block retreat

Intercept fleeing unit

Protect wounded

Raid camp

Restrictions: Must be physically reachable. Must make sense on the map. GM can deny impossible placement.

Battle then runs round-by-round with player allowed to each round choose ONE:

Continue waiting

Shift position

Join a side

Block retreat

Intercept fleeing unit

Protect wounded

Raid camp

46.4 Option 3 – Join a Side Now

Player picks:

Ally

Enemy

Or "I attack both"

They immediately:

Enter initiative order

Are treated as a new commander

Trigger morale effects

Trigger banner effects

Trigger reputation shifts

PART 47: PRE-BATTLE SPEECH SYSTEM (Pages 167-170)

47.1 Purpose

Ensure that before any battle begins, the system pauses to allow:

Player speech

Commander speech

War cries / morale events

47.2 Battle Start Phase

Every battle now begins with a Battle Initiation Phase before combat rolls occur:

Army Positions Determined

PRE-BATTLE SPEECH PHASE

Morale Effects Applied

Combat Resolution

47.3 Speech Trigger Conditions

The speech phase triggers when:

Player is physically present at the battle

Player commands the army personally

Player's banner is on the field

47.4 Speech Prompt

text

Your army forms ranks across the misty field. Men check straps.
Horses stamp the ground. Banners ripple in the cold wind.

All eyes turn to you.

Your men wait for your words.

What do you say?

47.5 Speech Morale Effects

After the speech, morale bonuses are rolled. Base roll: 1d6 + Leadership

Roll	Effect
1	Men uneasy (-5% morale)
2	Little effect
3	Steady morale
4	Inspired (+10% morale)
5	Battle fervor (+15% morale)
6+	Legendary (+25% morale)

47.6 The Six Blunders

Roll	Blunder	Effect
1	"Did He Just Say That?"	Loyalty -1 after battle
2	The Wrong Enemy	Rumors spread, enemy reputation boost
3	Rich Man's War	Recruitment harder, peasant units lose loyalty
4	The Long One	Men parody speech, commander becomes famous
5	Too Honest	Morale fragile, next retreat more likely
6	Legendary Blunder	Commander gains permanent flaw

PART 48: MASS COMBAT SYSTEM (Per Patch 11.0, 16.34, 16.35, 16.36)

48.1 Core Axioms

If a rule is written, it must be obeyed

If a rule is not written, it does not exist

No improvisation is permitted

All actions must resolve through defined procedures

All outcomes must be mechanical before narrative

48.2 Actions (Chosen in Secret)

Each round, every commander must choose one:

Keep Attacking (standard attack)

Defend (defensive posture)

Charge (aggressive assault)

Orderly Withdrawal (controlled retreat)

Retreat (flee the battlefield)

Request Aid (call for help)

Activate Trap (only if preset)

48.3 Initiative Phase

Each commander rolls: 1d6 + Initiative Bonus

Sort from highest to lowest. Resolve actions in this order.

48.4 Action Interaction Table

Action vs Target Action Dice Modifier

Attack vs Attack +0

Attack vs Defend -1d6

Attack vs Charge +1d6

Attack vs Withdrawal +2d6

Attack vs Retreat +3d6

Charge vs Defend +1d6 to defender (defender fights back)

Charge vs Charge +1d6 to both

Charge vs Withdrawal +2d6 to charger

Charge vs Trap -2d6

Trap vs Charge +3d6

Trap vs Attack +2d6

Defend vs Attack +1d6 to defender

Defend vs Defend No attack (standoff)

PART 61: WAR MARSHAL & GRAND ARMY SYSTEM (Pages 228-238)

61.1 Core Principle

When multiple armies unite under a single commander for a single purpose – a great invasion, a desperate defense, a crusade – that commander becomes a War Marshal. The army becomes a Grand Army.

A War Marshal is not a king. They do not hold land or collect taxes. They hold something rarer: the trust of other commanders, the authority to coordinate multiple forces, the weight of a shared purpose.

61.2 War Marshal Requirements

A commander may be declared War Marshal if:

Requirement Details

Multiple Armies Must command at least 2 separate armies (not just units)

Commander Approval All other army commanders must agree (Loyalty check or negotiation)

Shared Purpose The armies must have a common enemy or objective

Reputation Commander's reputation ≥ 5 OR all subordinate commanders have Loyalty ≥ 3

Banner Tier Commander's personal banner Tier ≥ 3

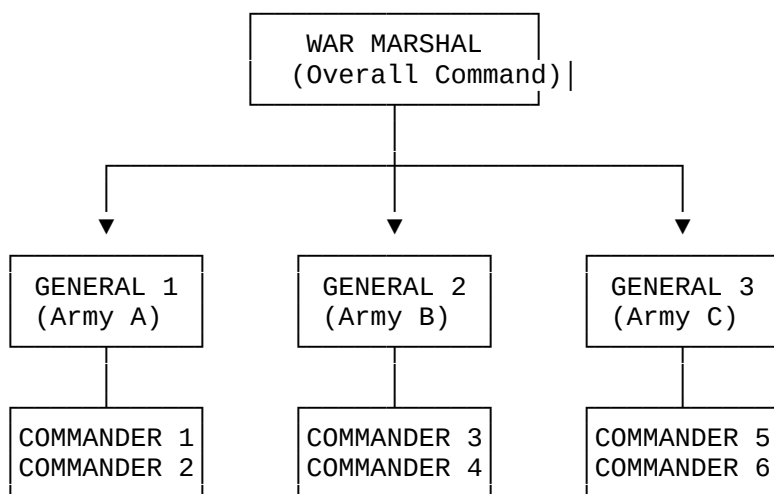

A War Marshal may be:

Self-declared (if conditions met)

Elected by council of commanders

61.3 Grand Army Structure – Command Hierarchy

text

61.4 Ranks Defined

Rank	Commands	Responsibilities
War Marshal	All armies	Overall strategy, final decisions, coordinates between armies
General	1 army (2+ units)	Tactical command of their army, reports to War Marshal
Commander	1 unit	Leads their unit, follows General's orders

61.5 Grand Army Size Tiers

Tier	Armies	Total Soldiers	Command Complexity
Small Grand Army	2-3 armies	500-1,500	-1 to coordination
Standard Grand Army	4-6 armies	1,500-5,000	0 coordination
Large Grand Army	7-10 armies	5,000-15,000	+1 to coordination DC
Epic Grand Army	11+ armies	15,000+	+2 to coordination DC

61.6 The War Council

Before a Grand Army can form, a War Council must be held. All army commanders gather to:

Declare the common purpose

Elect or confirm the War Marshal

Establish the chain of command

61.7 Commander Approval Roll

For each potential subordinate commander, roll to determine if they accept the War Marshal:

Base DC: 4

Modifier	Effect
War Marshal's Reputation ≥ 6	-1 DC
War Marshal's Banner Tier ≥ 4	-1 DC
Shared enemy	-1 DC
Previous successful cooperation	-1 DC
Personal grudge	+2 DC
Different faith	+1 DC
Ambitious commander (Priority: Glory)	+1 DC
Cautious commander (Temperament: Wary)	+1 DC
Roll 1d6 + modifiers:
Success ($\geq$ DC): Commander accepts and serves loyally
Failure: Commander refuses or demands terms

61.8 Demands of Refusing Commanders

If a commander refuses, they may demand:

A greater share of loot (+10-20%)

First choice of captured territory

Their army to act independently (not under direct command)

A specific role in the battle (vanguard, reserve, etc.)

Payment upfront (1d6 $\times$ 100 SD)

To be War Marshal instead (if they have support)

61.9 The War Marshal's Authority

Once confirmed, the War Marshal gains:

Authority	Effect
Strategic Command	Sets overall battle plan, chooses when and where to engage
Coordination Bonus	+1 to all initiative rolls for the Grand Army
Morale Boost	+1 Morale for all units (they fight for a united purpose)
Loot Distribution	Decides how spoils are divided (must be fair or face consequences)
Final Say	Can override individual commander decisions in critical moments

61.10 Grand Army in Battle – Initiative Order

When a Grand Army fights, each army operates as a separate entity but can coordinate.

Initiative Order:

War Marshal's army

All other armies (roll initiative within this group)

61.11 Coordination Actions

Instead of normal actions, a General may:

Coordination Action	Effect
Follow War Marshal's Lead	Matches War Marshal's action; +1 to initiative next round
Coordinate with Another Army	Both armies gain +1d6 when attacking same target
Hold Reserve	Army does not act this round; can respond to enemy moves (+2 initiative next round)
Request Support	Ask War Marshal for reinforcements; War Marshal may commit 1 unit
Signal Retreat	All armies aware of withdrawal plans; Coordinated withdrawal easier

61.12 The War Marshal's Special Actions
The War Marshal may choose one special action per battle:

War Marshal Action	Effect
Grand Charge	All armies with Aggressive commanders gain +2d6 on next attack
Feigned Retreat	One army pretends to flee; if enemy pursues, all other armies gain Ambush round
Concentrated Assault	Focus 2+ armies on a single enemy army; +3d6 total (max 12d6)
Defensive Line	All armies gain +1 AC for 2 rounds
Rally	One army that failed morale immediately rallies (no retreat)

61.13 Command Range
A War Marshal can only coordinate armies within:

Terrain	Command Range
Open plains	Visual range (all armies visible)
Rolling hills	2 armies within sight
Forest	Adjacent armies only
Mountains	Must have messengers (1 round delay)
Night/darkness	Reduced by half

If an army is out of command range, its General acts independently that round.

61.14 War Marshal's Personal Command Capacity
The War Marshal's personal Command Capacity (see Part 39) applies only to their own army – the troops they directly lead. This represents their ability to control their immediate forces.

61.15 Strategic Command Capacity
In addition to personal capacity, a War Marshal has a Strategic Command Capacity representing how many total soldiers they can effectively coordinate across all armies:

text
$$\text{Strategic Capacity} = \text{War Marshal's Personal Capacity} \times \text{Number of Subordinate Generals}$$

Example: A War Marshal with Personal Capacity 2,000 commanding 3 Generals:
$$\text{Strategic Capacity} = 2,000 \times 3 = 6,000 \text{ total troops across all armies}$$

Each General leads their own army (using their own capacities)

61.16 Exceeding Strategic Capacity
If total Grand Army size exceeds Strategic Capacity:

Excess	Penalty
Up to 25% over	-1 to all coordination rolls
26-50% over	-2 to coordination, orders delayed
51%+ over	Coordination impossible – armies act independently

61.17 Banner Tier and Strategic Capacity
A War Marshal's Banner Tier enhances their ability to coordinate:

Banner Tier	Strategic Capacity Bonus
Tier 3	+10% to Strategic Capacity

Tier 4 +25% to Strategic Capacity

Tier 5 +50% to Strategic Capacity

61.18 Unified Supply

A Grand Army must coordinate supply across all armies. Track:

Resource	Tracking Method
Total Food	Sum of all armies' FSU
Total Soldiers	Sum of all soldiers
Combined Consumption	(Total Soldiers ÷ 100) FSU per week
Supply Lines	Must feed all armies from same source or multiple sources

61.19 Supply Officers

The War Marshal may designate Supply Officers (typically Stewards or trusted commanders) to:

- Coordinate food distribution

- Manage supply trains

- Negotiate with merchants

61.20 Foraging Limits

When a Grand Army forages:

Roll once for the entire army (using best terrain among all armies)

Result applies to all armies equally

If result is 1 (Hunters attacked), casualties are spread across all armies

61.21 Supply Strain

A Grand Army strains local resources:

Army Size	Effect on Region
1,000-2,500	Local prices +25% (all goods)
2,500-5,000	Local prices +50%, foraging -1
5,000-10,000	Local prices +100%, foraging -2, unrest possible
10,000+	Local economy disrupted, famine risk, refugee generation

61.22 Grand Army Disbandment

A Grand Army may disband when:

- The common enemy is defeated

- The War Marshal dies or is incapacitated

- A major disagreement occurs between commanders

- Supply fails completely

61.23 Disbandment Roll

When the Grand Army disbands, each commander's final loyalty to the War Marshal is checked:

Roll 1d6 for each commander:

Roll	Result
1-2	Disgruntled (-2 Loyalty to War Marshal, may bear grudge)
3-4	Neutral (0 change)
5-6	Grateful (+1 Loyalty, may answer future calls faster)

Modifiers:

Successful campaign: +1

Failed campaign: -2

Fair loot distribution: +1

Unfair loot distribution: -2

War Marshal died in battle: +2 (heroic memory)

61.24 War Marshal's Legacy

If the War Marshal led a successful Grand Army campaign, they gain:

Success Level	Reputation Gain	Possible Title
Minor victory	+1	"The Marshal"
Major victory	+2	"Grand Marshal"
Legendary victory	+3	"Warlord" / "Conqueror"

61.25 Historical Example – The Three Armies at Goldengate

When House Virement, House Blackmere, and House Caldryn united against the northern invasion, they faced a problem: three lords, three armies, three competing egos. Lord Virement was the strongest, with 2,000 soldiers. Lord Blackmere brought 1,500. Lord Caldryn contributed 1,200. None would serve under the others.

They elected Lord Virement as War Marshal – not because they trusted him, but because his banner was Tier 4, granting him the Strategic Capacity to coordinate all 4,700 soldiers. His personal capacity was only 1,500, but his name held the army together.

At the Battle of Goldengate, the Grand Army shattered the invaders. Virement became known as "Virement the Marshal" thereafter. The alliance held for three years.

PART 62: COMMANDER DUELS – WHEN LEGENDS CLASH (Mega Patch 6.0)

62.1 Core Principle

Battles are not just clashing lines of anonymous men. Sometimes, a commander seeks out the enemy standard. Sometimes, the enemy captain rides to meet them. Sometimes, the fate of the battle hangs on steel meeting steel.

62.2 When Duels Can Happen

A duel may only occur when ALL of the following are true:

Both commanders are alive and on the battlefield

Both commanders are in units that are ENGAGED with each other

At least one commander CHOOSES to seek out the other

The player (if involved) declares the attempt

The NPC commander's personality allows it

62.3 Duel Trigger Check

PLAYER-DRIVEN DUEL

If the player commands a unit engaged with an enemy commander's unit, they may declare: "I seek out their commander." This replaces their normal action for the round.

NPC-DRIVEN DUEL

For each engaged pair of commanders where at least one is an NPC, roll 1d6 + Personality Modifiers. Base DC: 5.

Temperament Modifiers:

Temperament Modifier

Aggressive +2

Proud +2

Loyal +1

Disciplined -2
Cunning -1
Wary -2
Priority Modifiers:

Priority Modifier
Glory +2
Victory +1
Survival -2
Situation Modifiers:

Situation Modifier
Outnumbered +1
Winning battle +1
Losing battle +2
Commander wounded -3
62.4 Duel Resolution – Attack Pool
Each commander builds an attack pool:

Weapon Dice (from weapon tree)

+1d6 per 5 personal bodyguards still alive

+1d6 for mount bonus (if applicable)

± Interaction modifiers

Maximum pool: 6d6 (a duel is personal, not mass combat)

62.5 Duel Interaction Table
Attacker vs Defender Modifier
Aggressive vs Aggressive 0
Aggressive vs Defensive -1d6
Aggressive vs Cunning +1d6
Defensive vs Aggressive +1d6
Defensive vs Defensive -1d6
Defensive vs Cunning 0
Cunning vs Aggressive -1d6
Cunning vs Defensive +1d6
Cunning vs Cunning -2d6
Style is determined by commander's TEMPERAMENT.

62.6 Armor Class in Duels

Each commander uses their personal Armor Class. Mounted commanders may have cover from their horse:

Riding Horse: +0 AC

Warhorse: +1 AC

Heavy Destrier: +2 AC

62.7 Damage Resolution

Each d6 result:

Roll < enemy AC → no effect

Roll ≥ enemy AC → 1 HIT

Roll 6 → 2 HITS (critical blow)

62.8 Duel Outcomes

Result	Outcome
One commander has 3+ more hits	DECISIVE VICTORY – Loser killed (1-3) or

captured (4-6)

One commander has 1-2 more hits VICTORY – Loser wounded, retreats, -1 Tier permanently

Hits equal or within 1 STALEMATE – Both withdraw, no further effect

62.9 Morale Effects of Duels

IF COMMANDER IS KILLED

Their unit: Immediate morale check at -2

On failure, unit shatters (disbands)

On success, unit fights on but at -1 Tier

Their army: All allied units -1 Morale

Enemy army: All enemy units +1 Morale

IF COMMANDER IS CAPTURED

Their unit: Immediate morale check at -1

On failure, unit retreats (withdraws)

Enemy army: Victor gains +1 Loyalty

IF COMMANDER IS WOUNDED

Their unit: -1 Initiative for rest of battle

Commander out for 1d6 weeks

PART 63: PROTECTION & INTERVENTION (Mega Patch 6.0)

63.1 Core Principle

A lord does not fight alone. Around them are those who would die to keep them alive: champions, personal guards, banner carriers, and loyal commanders.

63.2 Who Can Intervene

PERSONAL CHAMPION

Must be assigned before battle

Fights in place of the lord

Has own stats (Tier 1-3, weapon, armor)

LOYAL COMMANDER

Must have Loyalty ≥ 4 to the targeted lord

Intercepts the attack, takes the duel themselves

PERSONAL GUARD

Unit of elite bodyguards

Counts as 1d6 extra dice in the lord's duel pool

If lord is killed, 50% die in vengeance

BANNER CARRIER

Can sacrifice themselves to preserve lord's honor

If banner falls but lord lives: +2 Morale

If lord falls but banner stands: army fights on

63.3 Intervention Triggers

FOR PERSONAL CHAMPION

Automatically if assigned and alive

Champion takes the duel in lord's place

FOR LOYAL COMMANDER

Roll 1d6, success on 4+

Modifier: +1 if Loyalty $\geq$ 5, +2 if Loyalty = 6

On success, they intercept

On failure, they are cut down (killed)

FOR PERSONAL GUARD

Automatically if present

Add 1d6 to lord's duel pool

If lord still loses, 1d3 guards die

FOR BANNER CARRIER

Lord may choose to sacrifice them (once per battle)

Banner carrier takes the killing blow instead of lord

Banner falls but lord lives

Army gains +2 Morale (rage/vengeance)

PART 64: CHAMPION'S DUEL – BATTLE BY PROXY (Per Patch 7.22)

64.1 Core Principle

Sometimes armies do not need to clash. Sometimes the gods of war demand a simpler sacrifice – one champion against another. The winner takes the battle. The loser takes his chances. This is the Champion's Duel, and every culture sees it differently. For some, it is the highest honor. For others, it is foolishness. For all, it is a moment that songs are made of.

64.2 Requirements

Both commanders must agree to the duel

Each side names a champion (themselves or another)

Terms are set before the fight: what does victory mean?

Both sides are bound by honor, not law – the loser may not keep their word

64.3 Why Agree to a Duel?

Reason	Explanation
--------	-------------

Avoid Mass Casualties	Save your army for the next fight
-----------------------	-----------------------------------

Morale Advantage	A won duel inspires troops
------------------	----------------------------

Quick Resolution	End a siege or campaign faster
------------------	--------------------------------

Personal Glory	Champions become legends
----------------	--------------------------

Cultural Tradition	Some regions expect this
--------------------	--------------------------

Reason to Refuse	Explanation
------------------	-------------

You'll Probably Lose	Your champion is weaker
----------------------	-------------------------

You Don't Trust Them	They might break their word
----------------------	-----------------------------

You Have Advantage	Why gamble when you can win for sure?
--------------------	---------------------------------------

Cultural Taboo	Some regions find duels dishonorable or foolish
----------------	---

64.4 Terms of the Duel

Before the fight, both sides must agree on what victory means.

Term Meaning

Battle Decided Winner's army wins the battle. Loser's army withdraws.

Single Combat Only No other fighting. The duel decides everything.

Champion's Fate Loser may be killed, captured, or ransomed.

Spoils Winner takes loser's horse, armor, weapons (standard).

Oath Both commanders swear to honor the result.

The Oath Problem: An oath is only as strong as the one who swears it. Some keep their word. Some don't.

64.5 Resolution – The Duel Itself

Use the Commander Duel system (Part 62) with these modifiers:

Situation Modifier

Fighting for your lord's honor +1 to all rolls

Fighting for your own freedom +2 to all rolls

Champion is known to both armies +1 morale to allied army if win

Champion is hated by enemy -1 morale to enemy if they lose

Duel Outcome:

Result Mechanical Effect

Win (decisive) Champion kills or captures opponent. Victory condition met.

Win (narrow) Champion wounds opponent. Opponent yields. Victory condition met.

Loss Champion dies or yields. Your army must abide by terms.

Stalemate Both champions withdraw. No decision – battle continues normally.

64.6 After the Duel – Keeping the Oath

After the duel, the losing commander must decide: keep the oath or break it?

Roll 1d6 + Culture Modifier + Situation Modifier

Cultural Honor Modifiers:

Culture Base Honor

Central Plains +2 (duels are sacred)

Western Rivers +1 (contract is contract)

Eastern Forests (Settled) +1 (word is bond)

Eastern Forests (Tribal) N/A (do not duel)

Southern Mountains +2 (ancestors watch)

Northern Snowlands +1 (oath is oath)

Nomad Steppe (Traditional) -1 (duels are for fools)

Nomad Steppe (Settled) 0 (depends on situation)

Situation Modifiers:

Situation Modifier

Champion was beloved by army +1 to keep oath

Champion was hated rival -1 to keep oath

Army is stronger than opponent's -2 to keep oath (why honor it?)

Army is weaker than opponent's +2 to keep oath (need mercy)

Commander is known oathbreaker -2 to keep oath

Commander is known honorable +2 to keep oath

Oath Resolution Table:

Total Outcome

1-3 Oath Broken – attack immediately (enemy gains +1 morale from outrage)

4-6 Oath Broken – but with shame (-2 reputation for oathbreaker)

7-9 Oath Kept – but grudgingly (army -1 morale, they wanted to fight)

10+ Oath Kept – honorably (both sides withdraw in peace, +1 reputation)

64.7 Champion's Rewards

The winning champion gains:

Reward Source

Enemy's Horse Taken from defeated champion
Enemy's Armor Taken from defeated champion
Enemy's Weapons Taken from defeated champion
Bonus Pay 100-1,000 SD from own lord
Fame +2 to reputation (regional)
Nickname May earn new epithet (e.g., "the Duelist," "Champion-Slayer")
Song 10% chance bards compose song about the duel
If champion kills the enemy:

+3 reputation instead of +2

Enemy's gear is finer (may include heirlooms)

Enemy's lord may owe blood feud

If champion yields:

-1 reputation (but alive)

May be ransomed later

PART 65: REGIONAL COMBAT DOCTRINES (Per Patch 7.20)

65.1 Core Principle

Every army fights in the image of its homeland. The terrain that shaped them, the enemies they've faced, the resources they have – all of it molds their way of war. When two armies from different regions meet, it is not just steel against steel. It is philosophy against philosophy.

A Central Plains knight does not understand why the Eastern footmen won't stand and fight.

An Eastern hunter does not understand why the Plainsmen charge across open ground to die.

A Mountain lord does not understand why anyone would fight anywhere but a pass.

They are all wrong. They are all right. They are all products of their land.

65.2 Regional Combat Doctrine Table

Region	Doctrine Name	Core Principle	Preferred Terrain	Preferred Action
Central Plains	The Thunder Charge	Overwhelming force, decisive battle	Open plains, gentle hills	Charge
Western Rivers	The Flood Tide	Mobility, control of waterways	Rivers, marshes, floodplains	Flank, withdraw, re-engage
Eastern Forests (Settled)	The Hunter's Noose	Patience, encirclement, the trap, surround, destroy	Forest edges, clearings, hills	Archers, skirmishers, light infantry
Eastern Forests (Tribal)	The Green Shadows	Invisibility, harassment, never a fair fight	Deep forest, darkness, fog	Ambush, vanish, ambush again
Southern Mountains	The Stone Wall	Defense, holding the pass, never retreat	Mountain passes, high ground, fortified positions	Heavy infantry, pikes, crossbows
Northern Snowlands	The Iron Wall	Endurance, aggression, break them before they break you	Snow, frozen ground, taiga	Hold, advance, outlast
Nomad Steppe (Traditional)	The Grass Fire	Speed, feint, surround, the endless retreat	Open steppe, any flat ground	Feigned retreat, encirclement, horse archers
Nomad Steppe (Settled)	The Two Wolves	Both ways – steppe speed, settled steel	Mixed, adaptable	Adapt to enemy, use both strengths

65.3 Central Plains – The Thunder Charge

"There is no problem that cannot be solved by riding at it very fast."

Preferred Army Composition:

40-60% Heavy Cavalry (knights, men-at-arms)

20-30% Heavy Infantry (shock troops)

10-20% Light Infantry (screen, scouts)

0-10% Archers (minimal, considered unknightly)

Tactical Advantages:

Situation Bonus

Charging on first round of combat +2d6 to all cavalry units

Fighting on open plains +1 Initiative all units

Enemy unit wavering +1 to morale damage

Tactical Disadvantages:

Situation Penalty

Fighting in forests -2 Initiative

Enemy uses feigned retreat -1 to morale checks (impatience)
Siege warfare -1 to all rolls (no room to charge)
Special Doctrine: The First Charge
When a Central Plains army charges in the first round of combat, roll 1d6:

Roll Outcome
1-2 Standard charge, no special effect
3-4 Thunderous impact – enemy front line loses 1d6 morale
5 Crushing blow – enemy front line must check morale immediately
6 Legendary charge – enemy line breaks, route possible in round 1
65.4 Western Rivers – The Flood Tide
"Fight, fall back, fight again. The river does not stop flowing because it meets a rock."

Preferred Army Composition:

30-40% Light Infantry (mobile, adaptable)
20-30% Skirmishers (javelins, slings)
20-30% River Boats (if water access)
10-20% Archers
0-10% Heavy Cavalry (rare, expensive)

Tactical Advantages:

Situation Bonus
Fighting near rivers +2 to flanking rolls
Withdraw action +1 to withdrawal success
Enemy in marsh terrain +2 to attack rolls
Tactical Disadvantages:

Situation Penalty
Fighting on open plains -1 to all rolls (no cover)
Besieged (no water access) -2 to morale
Enemy heavy cavalry -1 to defense (hard to stop)
Special Doctrine: The Ebb and Flow
A Western Rivers army may, once per battle, choose to withdraw from combat without triggering a pursuit. They reform and may re-enter combat on a flank the next round.

"They ran! After them!"
"No, wait – it's a trap –"
Too late. The "fleeing" army has reformed on the ridge and is now charging your exposed flank.

65.5 Eastern Forests (Settled) – The Hunter's Noose
"Let them come into the forest. The trees have teeth."

Preferred Army Composition:

40-50% Archers (longbows, shortbows)
20-30% Light Infantry (sword and shield)
10-20% Skirmishers
10-20% Heavy Infantry (guarding the center)

Tactical Advantages:

Situation Bonus

Fighting in forests +2 to ambush, +1 to all attacks
Enemy marching (not in formation) +2 to first round damage
Night fighting +1 to all rolls (they know the dark)
Tactical Disadvantages:

Situation Penalty
Fighting on open plains -2 to all rolls
Enemy with heavy armor -1 to ranged damage
Cavalry charges -1 to defense (difficult to stop)
Special Doctrine: The Noose Tightens
If a Settled Forest army spends 2+ rounds engaging the same enemy unit without breaking, they may attempt to encircle that unit.

Roll 1d6 + rounds engaged vs enemy commander's Tactics:

Success Outcome
Fail No effect
Success Enemy unit is flanked (-1 AC, cannot withdraw)
Major Success Enemy unit surrounded (-2 AC, cannot withdraw, morale check)
65.6 Eastern Forests (Tribal) – The Green Shadows
"They never saw us. They never saw anything."

Preferred Army Composition:

60-80% Skirmishers (hunters, ambushers)

20-40% Archers (shortbows, fast-firing)

0% Heavy Infantry (none)

0% Cavalry (none – horses are for trade, not war)

Tactical Advantages:

Situation Bonus
Ambush round +3 to all attacks (devastating)
Forest terrain +2 to stealth, +1 to all attacks
Fog or darkness +2 to all rolls (they are the dark)
Tactical Disadvantages:

Situation Penalty
Open field battle -3 to all rolls (they will not fight here)
Enemy in fortified position Cannot attack directly
Prolonged engagement Must withdraw after 3 rounds or take losses
Special Doctrine: Strike and Vanish
A Tribal Forest army may, after any successful attack, attempt to vanish – withdrawing from combat without triggering pursuit and without the enemy knowing which direction they went.

Roll 1d6 + terrain bonus:

Roll Outcome
1-2 Enemy tracks you – pursuit begins
3-4 You escape, but enemy knows general direction
5-6 You vanish completely. They have no idea where you went.
"Where did they go?"
"I don't know. I don't even know if they were ever really there."

65.7 Southern Mountains – The Stone Wall
"They can have the valleys. The passes are ours."

Preferred Army Composition:

Holding a pass +3 to morale checks (cannot retreat)

Enemy charging +2d6 to pike units when braced

Tactical Disadvantages:

Situation Penalty

Attacking in open field -2 to all rolls

Flanked -3 to morale (unaccustomed)

Pursuing retreating enemy -1 to all rolls (they don't chase)

Special Doctrine: The Unbroken Line

Mountain infantry, when in formation and defending, gain +1 AC for every round they hold (max +3). If they break, they lose all accumulated bonus.

They've been holding that pass for three days. Three days of charges, of arrows, of siege engines. They haven't moved. They won't move. The pass is theirs. It always was.

65.8 Northern Snowlands – The Iron Wall (Per Patch 35.0)

"The cold does not kill us. It makes us stronger. Will it do the same for you?"

Preferred Army Composition:

40% Pike Infantry

25% Heavy Infantry (axes, shields)

Enemy with fire weapons -1 to morale (they hate fire)

Special Doctrine: The Iron Wall

PHASE 1 – THE HOLD (Rounds 1-2)

Unit gains +1 AC per round spent holding (max +2)

Cannot attack (only defend)

Crossbows may fire over their heads

PHASE 2 – THE ADVANCE (Round 3+)

Lose all accumulated AC bonus

Gain +1d6 to all attacks this round

Shock troops may charge through gaps

65.9 Nomad Steppe (Traditional) – The Grass Fire

"You cannot catch the wind. You cannot hold the grass. Why do you think you can catch us?"

Preferred Army Composition:

60-80% Light Cavalry (horse archers)

20-40% Medium Cavalry (lancers)

0% Infantry (none – infantry is for settled folk)

Tactical Advantages:

Situation Bonus

Open terrain +2 Initiative all units

Feigned retreat Automatically succeeds, triggers ambush

Enemy pursuing +2 to attack rolls (they are disordered)

Tactical Disadvantages:

Situation Penalty

Fortified positions Cannot attack directly

Forests or mountains -3 to all rolls (trapped)

Winter (steppe north) -2 to all rolls (horses suffer)

Special Doctrine: The Feigned Retreat

A Traditional Nomad army may, once per battle, declare a Feigned Retreat. They appear to flee. If the enemy pursues, the nomads wheel and counter-charge with all units gaining +2d6 for that round.

They ran. We cheered. We chased. And then, somehow, they were all around us, arrows flying from every direction, and we realized – we were the hunted now.

65.10 Nomad Steppe (Settled) – The Two Wolves

"We have the speed of the steppe and the steel of the cities. Which do you want to face today?"

Preferred Army Composition:

30-40% Light Cavalry (horse archers, scouts)

20-30% Heavy Cavalry (lancers, armored)

20-30% Infantry (adapted from settled neighbors)

10-20% Archers/Crossbowmen

Tactical Advantages:

Situation Bonus

Adapting to enemy doctrine +1 to all rolls (they've seen it before)

Open terrain +1 Initiative

Fortified positions No penalty (they learned sieges)

Tactical Disadvantages:

Situation Penalty

None significant Adaptability is their strength

Special Doctrine: Choose Your Death

Before battle, a Settled Nomad commander may choose which aspect to emphasize for the first three rounds:

Aspect	Bonus
The Steppe	+2 Initiative, +1 to feigned retreat
The City	+1 AC, +1 to siege rolls
The Mixed	+1 to all rolls, no special

After three rounds, they may switch aspects (takes one round of reduced effectiveness).

They hit us with horse archers first – steppe style, hit and run. We formed shield wall. Then the heavy cavalry hit our flank – city style, armored lances. We turned to meet them. And then the infantry came through the gap. We didn't know which war we were fighting. They did.

65.11 Doctrine Counters

Some doctrines naturally counter others. When armies with opposing doctrines meet, apply these modifiers:

Attacker Doctrine	Defender Doctrine	Effect
Central Plains (Charge)	Eastern Forests (Ambush)	Defender +2 to first round (surprise)
Western Rivers (Fluid)	Southern Mountains (Stone)	Attacker -1 (can't flank mountains)
Eastern Forests (Ambush)	Nomad Steppe (Open)	Defender -2 (no cover on steppe)
Southern Mountains (Stone)	Northern Snowlands (Iron Wall)	Defender +2 (berserkers die on pikes)
Northern Snowlands (Iron Wall)	Central Plains (Charge)	Both +1 to first round (glorious clash)
Nomad Traditional (Feint)	Western Rivers (Fluid)	Even – both try to outflank each other
Nomad Settled (Adapt)	Any	+1 to identify enemy doctrine before battle

65.12 Doctrine Discovery

When facing an unfamiliar enemy, a commander may attempt to learn their doctrine before battle.

Recon Roll: 1d6 + Recon Rating vs DC based on enemy rarity:

Enemy Type	DC
Same region (familiar)	4
Adjacent region	6
Distant region	8
Never encountered before	10

Success Information Gained
Fail No useful information
Success Learn enemy's preferred terrain and action
Success by 5+ Learn their special doctrine and any counters

END OF BOOK IV – MILITARY SYSTEMS (COMPLETE)

BOOK V: ECONOMY & TRADE – COMPLETE RESTORATION

PART 66: THE LIVING ECONOMY – CORE PRINCIPLES (Per Patch 7.0, 13.0)

66.1 The Four Pillars of Economic Reality

The world's economy rests on four interconnected pillars. No pillar stands alone. A failure in one will eventually topple the others.

Pillar	Description	Player Impact
Resources	Raw goods extracted from the land (Grain, Iron, Timber, etc.) Must be gathered, stored, and allocated. Quality matters.
Production	Crafting and manufacturing (weapons, armor, tools)	Turns raw goods into usable equipment. Requires facilities and labor.
Currency	Silverdew (SD) – the lifeblood of transactions	Used for wages, trade, construction, and tribute. Must flow, not just sit.
Population	The people who work, fight, and pay taxes	The ultimate resource.

Over-exploitation leads to decline.

66.2 The Flow of Wealth – A Closed System

The world economy is a closed system. Coin does not appear from nowhere. It is:

Earned: Through taxes, trade, loot, or tribute.

Spent: On wages, construction, equipment, and tribute.

Circulated: Paid to soldiers who buy food from farmers who pay taxes to lords.

Lost: Through waste, corruption, sacking, or hoarding.

If the player hoards coin, the economy slows. If they spend wisely, it grows.

66.3 The Labor Truth

A soldier holding a sword is not a farmer holding a plow. Every man recruited for war is one less man growing food, cutting timber, or mining ore. This is the fundamental trade of the Age of Shattered Oaths.

The Equation:

If you increase Soldiers, you must decrease the workforce – or import labor (refugees, slaves) and goods from elsewhere.

PART 67: SILVERDEW COIN SYSTEM (Pages 139)

67.1 Core Currency

Silverdew Coins (SD) are the only currency. Design assumptions:

10-20 SD = arm a small unit cheaply

25-50 SD = elite equipment

100+ SD = major military investment

67.2 Unit Equipment Cost

To equip a unit: $\text{Total Cost} = \text{Weapon Cost} + \text{Armor Cost}$

Example: Halberds (22) + Chain (25) = 47 Silverdew

67.3 Balance Consequences

If a player has too much silver:

Mercenary prices rise

Bandits become bolder

Lords request "loans"

Assassination attempts increase

If a player has too little:

Soldiers desert

Vassals become restless

Trade partners demand upfront payment

Reputation suffers

PART 68: HOLDINGS & INCOME (Per Patch 7.2, 13.0, 14.0)

68.4 Quality Determination & Persistence

Initial Quality: Roll 1d6 at game start:

1-3 = Common

4-5 = High-Grade

6 = Superb

New Construction: Roll immediately upon completion using the same table.

Quality is Fixed: A patch's quality tier is permanent unless a narrative event explicitly changes it.

Quality Affects:

Sale Price: Value = Base Price × Quality Multiplier

Crafting: Items crafted from higher-tier materials gain combat bonuses

Reputation: Holdings known for Superb goods gain +1 regional reputation

68.5 Complete Holding Revenue Calculation

Daily Revenue = Base Holding Income + Resource Patch Incomes + Fortification Income + Trade Income + Tribute

Monthly Revenue Example – Town Lord

Source	Calculation	Monthly SD
Town (Tier 3)	30 SD/day × 30	900 SD
Grain Field (Tier 2)	5 SD/day × 30	150 SD
Iron Mine (Tier 1)	7.5 SD/day × 30	225 SD
Watchtower	2.5 SD/day × 30	75 SD
Local Trade (1 caravan)	25 SD/week × 4	100 SD
TOTAL MONTHLY INCOME		1,450 SD

Monthly Revenue Example – City Lord

Source	Calculation	Monthly SD
City (Tier 5)	87.5 SD/day × 30	2,625 SD
Grain Field (Tier 3)	7.5 SD/day × 30	225 SD
Iron Mine (Tier 2)	12.5 SD/day × 30	375 SD
Timber Camp (Tier 2)	7.5 SD/day × 30	225 SD
Castle (Tier 4)	30 SD/day × 30	900 SD
Trade (3 caravans)	75 SD/week × 4	300 SD
TOTAL MONTHLY INCOME		4,650 SD

PART 69: POPULATION & LABOR POOL (Per Patch 7.0)

69.1 The Workforce

Every holding has a population. A portion of that population is the Labor Pool – able-bodied adults who work, pay taxes, and can be recruited.

Holding Type	Population	Labor Pool (40%)	Max Sustainable Garrison
Hamlet	100-200	40-80	5
Village	300-1,500	120-600	15
Large Village	1,500-3,000	600-1,200	30
Town	3,000-7,500	1,200-3,000	60
Large Town	7,500-15,000	3,000-6,000	120
City	15,000-30,000	6,000-12,000	250
Large City	30,000-60,000	12,000-24,000	400
Metropolis	60,000-150,000	24,000-60,000	600
Capital	150,000+	60,000+	1,000

69.2 Labor Allocation

The lord must decide how to allocate the Labor Pool each season:

Occupation	Productivity	Notes
Farming	Produces FSU	Essential for food security
Mining/Logging	Produces resources	Essential for crafting and trade
Crafting	Produces goods	Converts resources into equipment
Military Service	Produces soldiers	Reduces all other production

69.3 The Recruitment Cost (Per Patch 7.0)

When a lord recruits a soldier, they are not just paying for equipment. They are permanently (or semi-permanently) removing a worker from the labor pool.

Total Cost to Recruit 1 Soldier =

(Equipment Cost) + (Lost Productivity) + (Signing Bonus/Incentives)

Equipment Cost: As per crafting tables

Lost Productivity: The value of what that worker would have produced.

Represented by a temporary -10% to holding income for 3 months per 10% of the labor pool recruited.

Signing Bonus: Typically 1-5 SD per recruit, paid upfront to the soldier's family.

Example:

A lord recruits 100 soldiers from a Town with a Labor Pool of 800.

Cost Type Calculation Cost

Equipment Cost (Spear & Leather) 100×22 SD 2,200 SD

Lost Productivity 100 is 12.5% of labor pool -12.5% income for 3 months

Signing Bonus 100×2 SD 200 SD

Total Immediate Cost 2,400 SD + 3 months reduced income

69.4 Tax Base Calculation (Per Patch 13.0)

Base Holding Income (SD/month) = (Population $\div$ 10) $\times$ Tier Multiplier $\times$ 2.5

Tier Tier Multiplier Formula Example (5,000 pop)

0-1 1.5 $5,000 \div 10 = 500 \times 1.5 \times 2.5 = 1,875$ SD/month

2-3 2.0 $5,000 \div 10 = 500 \times 2.0 \times 2.5 = 2,500$ SD/month

4-5 2.5 $5,000 \div 10 = 500 \times 2.5 \times 2.5 = 3,125$ SD/month

6-7 3.0 $5,000 \div 10 = 500 \times 3.0 \times 2.5 = 3,750$ SD/month

8 4.0 $5,000 \div 10 = 500 \times 4.0 \times 2.5 = 5,000$ SD/month

69.5 Worker Productivity Table

Worker Type Output per Day (Common) Output per Day (High-Grade) Output per Day (Superb)

Farmer 0.4 FSU 0.6 FSU 0.8 FSU

Miner (Iron) 0.1 iron 0.15 iron 0.2 iron

Miner (Stone) 0.1 stone 0.15 stone 0.2 stone

Logger 0.2 timber 0.3 timber 0.4 timber

Crafter (simple) 0.2 items/day - -

Crafter (complex) 0.1 items/day - -

PART 70: WEEKLY INCOME & ECONOMIC CYCLE (Per Patch 7.0)

70.1 Core Rule

All income sources defined as "per day" are accumulated automatically.

Weekly Ledger Income = (Daily Income $\times$ 7) + Weekly Income Sources

Weekly sources include:

Caravan income

Tribute payments

Shadow income rolls

Toll spikes

Event rewards

70.2 Integrated Weekly Economic Cycle

Each week, the following occurs automatically during the Weekly Ledger:

Phase Description

PHASE 1: PRODUCTION All resource patches generate yield based on their Tier and Labor allocation. All crafting facilities convert resources into goods. Holdings generate base income from taxes.

PHASE 2: CONSUMPTION Garrisons and field armies consume FSU. Population consumes FSU. Crafting facilities consume resources from storage.

PHASE 3: TRADE & TRIBUTE Caravans depart/arrive, generating trade income. Tribute payments are deducted from the paying house and added to the receiver. Vassal obligations are checked.

PHASE 4: WAGES & UPKEEP Army wages are deducted. Holding maintenance costs are deducted. Engineer and specialist wages are deducted.

PHASE 5: TREASURY UPDATE Net change is calculated. New treasury total is recorded. If treasury is negative, Crisis Mode begins.

PHASE 6: TIME CONFIRMATION System pauses and presents a summary of the week's economic activity. Player confirms continuation or makes adjustments.

70.3 Monthly Income Summary by Lord Type

Lord Type Holdings Monthly Income Can Field (Standing) Can Raise (Campaign)

Knight 1 Village 225-300 SD 60 soldiers 20 soldiers

Baron	1 Town + patches	1,000-1,500 SD	250 soldiers	80 soldiers

King (2-3 months income)
Full Invasion + colossal food	1 year	10,000 soldiers	Purchased + loot	52,000 SD +
Multiple kingdoms combined

PART 71: THE COMPLETE COST OF A SOLDIER (Per Patch 6.1, 7.2)

71.1 Core Principle

A single soldier requires two distinct resources each week:

Resource	Cost	Purpose
Food	1 FSU feeds 100 soldiers	Prevents starvation
Wage	10 soldiers = 1 Silverdew	Prevents desertion

71.2 Equipment Costs (One-time investments)

Equipment Set	Cost (SD)
Spear + Leather	22 SD
Sword + Leather	25 SD
Spear + Chain	37 SD
Sword + Chain	40 SD
Halberd + Chain	47 SD
Bow + Leather	30 SD
Crossbow + Leather	40 SD

71.3 Weekly Upkeep Costs (Recurring)

Cost Type	Per 100 Soldiers
-----------	------------------

Wages	10 SD/week
Food (own farms)	0 SD
Food (market grain)	100 SD/week
Food (market mix)	120 SD/week

71.4 True Weekly Cost of 100 Soldiers (Integrated Model)

Scenario	Food Cost	Wage Cost	Lost Labor Cost	Equipment Amortization*	Total Weekly Cost
Self-sufficient (own farms), existing equipment	0 FSU	10 SD	0 SD	0 SD	10 SD
Buying food from village, existing equipment	100 SU Grain (100 SD)	10 SD	0 SD	0 SD	110 SD
Buying food, new recruits (amortized)	100 SU Grain (100 SD)	10 SD	8 SD	20 SD	138 SD + 100 SU

*Amortization: Spreading the initial equipment cost over 52 weeks. A 40 SD equipment cost = ~0.77 SD/week.

71.5 What This Means for a Lord

Lord's Monthly Income	Standing Army (own food)	3-Month Campaign Army (buying food)
Village Lord (225 SD)	225 soldiers	75 soldiers
Town Lord (900 SD)	900 soldiers	300 soldiers
City Lord (2,625 SD)	2,625 soldiers	875 soldiers
Major City Lord (4,650 SD)	4,650 soldiers	1,550 soldiers
Capital Lord (15,000 SD)	15,000 soldiers	5,000 soldiers

PART 72: TRADE & CARAVAN SYSTEM (Per Patch 7.6)

72.1 Core Principle

Trade is not abstract income. It is the movement of actual goods from places of plenty to places of scarcity. A caravan's profit is the difference between the purchase price at the origin and the sale price at the destination, minus costs, risks, and time.

The Merchant's Equation:

Profit = (Sale Price - Purchase Price) × Volume - Operating Costs - Risk Premium

72.2 Caravan Profit Factors

Factor	Effect on Profit	Calculation
--------	------------------	-------------

Journey Time	Longer = higher profit	+5% per week of travel (base)
--------------	------------------------	-------------------------------

Goods Type	Different demand curves	See 72.4
------------	-------------------------	----------

Quality Tier	Higher quality = exponential value	Common: 1.0x, High-Grade: 1.5x, Superb: 2.0x
--------------	------------------------------------	--

72.6 Quality Multipliers

Quality	Base Price	Modifier	Luxury/Strategic Modifier	Rarity Premium
Common	1.0x	1.0x	None
High-Grade	1.5x	2.0x for luxury/strategic	+10% if sold far from source
Superb	2.0x	4.0x for luxury/strategic	+25% if sold far from source

Complete Formula:
 Final Price = Base Price × Demand Multiplier × Journey Multiplier × Quality Multiplier × Rarity Premium

Example – Superb Furs from Eastern Forests sold in Central Plains:

Base: 15 SD

Demand: Central Plains craves furs (×1.5)

Journey: 3 weeks (×1.15)

Quality: Superb (×2.0)

Rarity: Premium (×1.25)

Final Price: $15 \times 1.5 \times 1.15 \times 2.0 \times 1.25 = 64.7$ SD per SU

72.7 Market Saturation & Flooding

If too much of a single good arrives in a market, prices crash.

Market Capacity by Settlement:

Settlement Type	Capacity (SU per month per good type)
-----------------	---------------------------------------

Village	50 SU
---------	-------

Town	150 SU
------	--------

City	500 SU
------	--------

Capital	2,000 SU
---------	----------

Saturation Effect:

Percent of Capacity Filled	Price Modifier
----------------------------	----------------

0-25%	1.0x - 1.1x (scarcity bonus)
-------	------------------------------

26-50%	0.9x - 1.0x
--------	-------------

51-75%	0.7x - 0.9x
--------	-------------

76-100%	0.5x - 0.7x
---------	-------------

100%+	0.3x - 0.5x (glut)
-------	--------------------

Flooding the Market:

When you dump massive amounts:

Flood Ratio = $\text{SU dumped} \div \text{Market Capacity}$

Roll 1d6 + Flood Ratio:

Roll	Outcome
------	---------

1-3	Minor glut (prices -10% for 1d6 months)
-----	---

4-5	Market crash (prices -25% for 1d6 months)
-----	---

6+ Economic shock (prices -50% for 1 year)

72.8 Caravan Operating Costs

Every caravan has costs that must be subtracted from profit.

Cost Type	Amount	Notes
Guards	1 SD per 10 guards per week	Minimum 10 guards per caravan
Wagons	1 SD per wagon per week	Each wagon carries 20 SU
Drivers	1 SD per 2 wagons per week	1 driver per 2 wagons
Tolls	Varies by route	1-10 SD per border/bridge
Bribes	Optional	5-50 SD for safe passage
Contingency	10% of cargo value	Losses to bandits, spoilage, etc.

Typical Caravan Composition:

Caravan Size	Wagons	Guards	Drivers	Capacity (SU)	Weekly Cost
Small 5	10	3	100	23 SD/week
Medium	10	20	5	200	45 SD/week
Large 20	40	10	400	90 SD/week
Massive	50	100	25	1,000	225 SD/week

72.9 Complete Caravan Profit Formula

Step Calculation

Step 1 Purchase Cost = Σ (Goods Volume $\times$ Local Price)

Step 2 Sale Value = Σ (Goods Volume $\times$ Destination Price)

Step 3 Total Costs = (Weekly Cost $\times$ Weeks Travel) + Tolls + Bribes + Contingency

Step 4 Gross Profit = Sale Value – Purchase Cost

Step 5 Net Profit = Gross Profit – Total Costs

Step 6 Margin % = (Net Profit $\div$ Purchase Cost) $\times$ 100

72.10 Caravan Profit Examples

Example 1 – Local Grain Trade

Route: Village to Town (3 days, 0.5 weeks)

Goods: 100 SU Grain (Common)

Purchase: 100 SU $\times$ 1 SD = 100 SD

Destination Price: Town needs grain ($\times 1.2$) $\times$ journey ($\times 1.025$) = 1.23 SD

Sale Value: 100 $\times$ 1.23 = 123 SD

Operating Costs: Small caravan, 0.5 weeks = 12 SD

Net Profit: 123 – 100 – 12 = 11 SD (11% margin)

Example 2 – Cross-Region Luxury Trade

Route: Eastern Forests (North) to Central Plains Capital (3 weeks)

Goods: 50 SU Superb Furs

Purchase: Furs base 15 SD $\times$ Superb ($\times 2.0$) $\times$ local supply (-15%) = 25.5 SD/SU

Total Purchase: 50 $\times$ 25.5 = 1,275 SD

Destination Price: Central Plains craves furs ($\times 1.5$) $\times$ journey ($\times 1.15$) $\times$ Superb ($\times 2.0$) $\times$ rarity ($\times 1.25$) = 64.7 SD/SU

Sale Value: 50 $\times$ 64.7 = 3,235 SD

Operating Costs: Medium caravan, 3 weeks = 135 SD + tolls (20 SD) + contingency (324 SD) = 479 SD

Net Profit: 3,235 – 1,275 – 479 = 1,481 SD (116% margin)

Example 3 – Strategic Resources in Wartime

Route: Southern Mountains to Northern Snowlands (6 weeks)

Goods: 100 SU High-Grade Iron

Purchase: Iron base 5 SD × High-Grade (×1.5) × local supply (-20%) = 6 SD/SU

Total Purchase: 100 × 6 = 600 SD

Destination Price: North craves iron (+50%) × war demand (+50% situational) × journey (×1.3) × High-Grade (×1.5) = 5 × 2.0 × 1.3 × 1.5 = 19.5 SD/SU

Sale Value: 100 × 19.5 = 1,950 SD

Operating Costs: Large caravan, 6 weeks = 540 SD + heavy bribes (100 SD) + contingency (195 SD) = 835 SD

Net Profit: 1,950 – 600 – 835 = 515 SD (86% margin, but high risk)

72.11 Caravan Risk Table

Each week of travel, roll 1d6 for incidents on standard routes. Dangerous routes (war zones, bandit country) roll 1d6 with +1 modifier.

Roll	Incident	Effect
1	Bandit attack	Lose 1d10% of cargo, 1d6 guards killed
2	Weather delay	+1 week travel, +1d6×10% costs
3	Broken wagon	Lose 1d3 days, repair costs 5 SD
4	River crossing issue	Toll doubled or 1 week delay
5	Guard dispute	Pay 1d6×5 SD bonus or they leave
6	Smooth travel	No incident
7+	Disaster!	Roll twice on this table

72.12 Caravan Tier Growth

As caravans successfully complete routes, they gain tiers, increasing capacity and profit potential.

Tier	Name	Wagons	Guards	Capacity	Profit Bonus
I	Trial Caravan	5	10	100 SU	Base
II	Regular Route	10	20	200 SU	+5% to negotiations
III	Major Caravan	20	40	400 SU	+10% to destination prices
IV	Trade Artery	35	70	700 SU	+15%, can ignore one toll
V	Merchant Prince	50	100	1,000 SU	+20%, can demand audience with lords

Tier Advancement:

I → II: Complete 3 successful journeys

II → III: Complete 6 successful journeys OR one epic journey (4+ weeks)

III → IV: Complete 10 successful journeys OR establish new trade route

IV → V: Complete 20 successful journeys OR receive lord's charter

72.13 Player Options for Caravans

When a player sends a caravan, they must specify:

Origin Holding (where goods are purchased)

Destination Holding (where goods are sold)

Goods Types and Volumes (what they're carrying)

Quality Grades (if they have multiple tiers)

Guard Level (minimum 10, more = safer but costly)

Route Choice (safe but long, fast but dangerous, etc.)

System Response:

73.5 Quality Premium

The market price for goods is dynamically affected by quality and local demand.

Quality Premium	Base Price Modifier	Trade Good Premium	Strategic Material
-----------------	---------------------	--------------------	--------------------

Common	1.0x None None
High-Grade	1.5x +10% if traded far	+25% to military buyers
Superb	2.0x +25% if traded far	+50% to military buyers

73.6 Strategic Material Scarcity

High-quality Iron and Tar are not just valuable – they are strategic resources. Lords actively seek them out.

If a holding produces High-Grade or Superb Iron or Tar, neighboring lords may:

Offer trade agreements

Demand it as tribute

Attempt to conquer it

Send spies to sabotage it

73.7 Quality Reputation

A holding known for producing Superb goods gains:

+1 regional reputation

+1 to trade negotiation rolls

Increased chance of attracting skilled artisans

PART 74: GOODS TRACKING SYSTEM (Per Patch 7.0, 7.7, 7.14)

74.1 Core Rule

All goods are tracked in Supply Units (SU) inside your ledger.

74.2 Goods Classification

FOOD GOODS (feed people & armies) – Convert into Food Supply Units (FSU):

Grain

Fish

Salted Meat

Dried Fruit

Cheese

Livestock (must be slaughtered locally)

Conversion: 100 SU of Food Goods = 1 FSU

TRADE GOODS (wealth & war industry) – Cannot feed troops:

Iron

Timber

Salt

Wine

Cloth

Horses

Silver

River 2d6 fish 1d3 – –
Swamp 1d3 FSU 1d6 rare herbs 1d3 timber 1d3 peat (fuel)

74.5 Resource Quality & Crafting Bonuses (Per Patch 6.4)

Core Principle: The quality of raw materials directly affects both their market price and the performance of items crafted from them. For most goods, only the price is affected. For Iron and Tar, higher quality also imparts combat bonuses.

Crafting with Quality Materials

When a crafter uses high-quality Iron or Tar to create an item, the finished product gains the corresponding combat bonus.

Quality	Name	Price Multiplier	Crafting Bonus
1	Common	1.0x	None
2	High-Grade	1.5x	1 reroll per battle
3	Superb	2.0x	2 rerolls per battle

Weapons and Ammunition: Grants the specified number of rerolls per battle.

Armor: High-quality armor allows the wearer to ignore the first successful hit in a battle (High-Grade: ignore one hit; Superb: ignore two hits).

Tar: Used in fire arrows, Greek fire, and siege ammunition. Grants +1 to hit (High-Grade) or +2 to hit (Superb), or adds +1d6 to the attack pool.

Crafting Requirement: To create an item with a quality bonus, the crafter must use materials of that quality. If materials of mixed quality are used, the finished item defaults to the lowest quality used.

74.6 Finished Goods Tracking (Per Patch 7.7)

All finished weapons, armor, and mounts are tracked as distinct items in holding inventories. They are not abstract "supply units" – they are individual items with location, quality, and history.

text

ITEM TRACKING EXAMPLE

Item: Sword (Superb Quality)
Crafted: Velrinport, Day 45 of Sunreach, Year 12
Crafted By: Master Smith Harald
Current Location: Velrinport Armory (in stock)
Quality: Superb (2 rerolls per battle)
Price: 30 SD

When a soldier is equipped:

The specific item is removed from inventory

It becomes part of that unit's equipment

If the soldier dies, the item may be looted

If the soldier deserts, the item goes with them

74.7 Equipment Persistence Rules (Per Patch 7.7)

No Item Spawning: Every weapon, armor suit, and mount in the world at game start is placed during world generation. Nothing appears later except through crafting, trade, or loot.

Crafted Items Enter Inventory: When a smith finishes crafting a sword, it is added to the holding's inventory.

Imported Items Enter Inventory: When a caravan arrives, its goods are added to the destination holding's inventory.

Looted Items Enter Inventory: After a battle, recovered equipment is added to the victor's inventory.

Equipped Items Are Tracked: A soldier equipped with a specific sword now has that sword.

Inherited Items: Starting equipment from character creation exists in the world – it was crafted years ago, passed down, or looted by ancestors.

74.8 Regional Production Capacity

Each holding type has a maximum monthly production capacity for crafted goods.

Holding Type (armor/month)	Smithy Capacity (weapons/month)			Armory Capacity
		Master Armors
Hamlet	0	0	0
Village	5-10	0-5	0
Large Village	10-20	5-10	0
Town	20-40	10-20	0-1
Large Town	40-80	20-40	1-2
City	80-150	40-80	2-4
Capital	150-300	80-150	4-8

Example – City Production:

100 swords/month (requires 500 iron, 100 leather)

60 chain suits/month (requires 1,200 iron)

3 plate suits/month (requires 90 iron, master armorer)

Total iron required: 1,790 iron/month

City's iron mines produce: 30-90 iron/month

Deficit must be imported by caravan

74.9 Holding Inventory Generation at World Start

At world generation, every holding's initial inventory is populated based on:

Holding type

Local resources

Local facilities

Random variation

Example – Town with Iron Mine and Smithy:

Item	Base	Iron Mine Bonus	Smithy Bonus	Final
Swords	3d10	+1d10	+2d10	6d10 (avg 33)
Spears	8d20	+2d20	+1d20	11d20 (avg 115)
Chain	4d6	+1d6	+2d6	7d6 (avg 24)
Plate	1d3	0	+1	1d3+1 (avg 3)

Example – Village with No Facilities:

Item	Base	Modifiers	Final
Swords	1d10	None	1d10 (avg 5)
Spears	3d20	None	3d20 (avg 30)
Chain	1d6	None	1d6 (avg 3)
Plate	0	None	0

74.10 Inventory Replenishment

After items are purchased, they are gone until replenished.

Replenishment Sources:

Local Crafting: Items crafted locally are added to inventory

Arriving Caravans: Items imported by caravan are added to inventory

Tribute: Items received as tribute are added to inventory

Loot: Items brought back by armies are added to inventory

Replenishment Rates (Monthly):

Holding Type		Weapons		Armor Plate		Horses
Hamlet	1d6	0	0	0
Village	2d10	1d6	0	1d3
Large Village	4d10	2d6	0	1d6
Town	6d10	4d6	0-1	2d6
Large Town	10d10	6d6	1d3	4d6
City	15d10	10d6	1d6	6d6
Capital	25d10	15d6	2d6	10d6

These represent maximum possible replenishment if all conditions are met. Actual replenishment may be lower.

74.11 Equipment Flavor Descriptors (Per Patch 7.14)

Every piece of crafted equipment now has optional flavor fields in the tracking ledger.

PART 75: UNIFIED SUPPLY SYSTEM (Pages 158-161)

75.1 Weekly Food Consumption

1 FSU feeds 100 troops for 1 week

Each week: Subtract FSU, update ledger, check starvation

If Food = 0: Morale drops, desertion roll, unrest rises, prices spike, siege surrender checks

75.2 Hunting System

Each hunting party rolls 1d6 per week:

Roll	FSU Gained
1-2	0.5 FSU
3-4	1 FSU

5-6 2 FSU

Condition Modifier

Forest / River +1

Winter -1

Enemy territory -1

75.3 Foraging Check

Roll 1d6 per unit per week:

Terrain	Success (4+)	Effect
---------	--------------	--------

Plains	4+ 0.5 FSU
--------	------------	--

Forest	3+ 1 FSU
--------	----------	--

Hills 4+	0.5 FSU
----------	---------	--

Mountains	5+ 0.25 FSU
-----------	-------------	--

Enemy territory	-1 modifier
-----------------	-------------	--

Winter	-2 modifier
--------	-------------	--

75.4 Food Storage Capacity

Holding Type	Maximum FSU Storage
--------------	---------------------

Village	5 FSU
---------	-------

Town	20 FSU
------	--------

City	50 FSU
------	--------

Castle	30 FSU
--------	--------

Bastion	60 FSU
---------	--------

Capital	100 FSU
---------	---------

Granary Upgrade: Doubles storage capacity.

75.5 Spoilage

Stored food does not spoil unless:

Holding is besieged for 30+ days (roll 1d6 monthly, on 1-2 some spoils)

Flooding event occurs

Holding is sacked (food destroyed or stolen)

PART 76: ARMY WAGE UPKEEP (Per Patch 6.1)

76.1 Core Rule

All soldiers require payment each week.

10 Soldiers = 1 Silver per Week

Soldiers	Weekly Wage
----------	-------------

50	5 Silver
----	----------

100	10 Silver
-----	-----------

300	30 Silver
-----	-----------

1,000	100 Silver
-------	------------

10,000	1,000 Silver
--------	--------------

76.2 Army Upkeep Formula

Army Upkeep = Food Supply Consumption + Soldier wages

76.3 Upkeep for Landed vs. Landless Commanders

Landed Characters (Rulers): The cost of army wages for all units under their command is deducted from their personal Treasury each week during the Weekly Ledger.

Landless Characters: Their warband's payment is handled through the Loot System. If they have no loot, they cannot pay wages, leading to consequences.

76.4 Unpaid Soldiers

If a player cannot or does not pay the required weekly wages:

Consequence Effect

Immediate Morale Loss All affected units suffer -2 Morale

Desertion Roll (Week 1) End of week, roll 1d6 per unit. On 1-2, 1d10 soldiers desert

Disobedience (Week 2) If unpaid for two weeks, commander must make Loyalty check (DC 5). On failure, unit refuses orders.

Mutiny/Disbandment (Week 3) Unit disbands. Landless warbands may turn on the player.

PART 77: TRIBUTE & VASSAL SYSTEMS (Pages 168-173)

77.1 Tribute Agreement

Tribute begins when one faction agrees or is forced to provide resources to another. A tribute agreement must define:

Tribute Giver

Tribute Receiver

Tribute Type

Tribute Amount

Payment Frequency

77.2 Tribute Types

Type Description

Food Tribute Grain, livestock, supplies

Silverdew Coin Currency or precious metals

Trade Goods Timber, Iron, Horses, Wine, Salt

Men (Military Levy) Troops sent to serve another ruler

77.3 Persistent Tribute Record

text

TRIBUTE AGREEMENT

Giver: _____

Receiver: _____

Type: _____

Amount: _____

Frequency: _____

Started: Year ____ Month ____

Status: ☐ Active ☐ Defaulted ☐ Completed

77.4 Tribute Default

If tribute is not paid, possible outcomes:

Warning

Sanctions

Seizure of land

Military retaliation

Rebellion

77.5 Vassal Status

When a lord swears loyalty to another ruler, they become a Vassal.

text

VASSAL RECORD

Vassal: _____

Liege: _____

Lands: _____

Oath Status: ☐ Sworn ☐ Strained ☐ Broken

77.6 Vassal Obligations

Every vassal must provide at least one tribute type.

77.7 Vassal Loyalty Pressure

State Description

Loyal Tribute flows normally

Strained Late tribute or disputes

Rebellious Tribute ignored, uprising risk rises

PART 78: BRANCH FAMILY ECONOMICS (Per Patch 7.0)

78.1 Branch Family Economic Role

Branch families are not just military assets – they are economic nodes in the lord's network. Each Branch Family:

Controls 1-3 resource patches or small holdings

Employs 50-500 workers

Pays Tiered Tribute to the main family

Has its own treasury

78.2 Branch Family Tribute Table

Branch Relationship	Tribute to Main Family	Main Family Obligation
Resentful (-2)	5% of income	None (they hide wealth)
Lukewarm (0)	10% of income	Protection if directly threatened
Loyal (+1)	15% of income	Military support, trade rights
Ambitious (+1 to main, -1 hidden)	10% of income	Same as Loyal, but they plot

78.3 Economic Integration

When a main family builds a Guild Hall, Market Square, or Workshop in their capital, nearby branch families gain a +10% income bonus.

PART 79: WORLD ECONOMIC RESPONSE (Per Patch 7.0)

79.1 Lords Notice Wealth

If the player's treasury exceeds 10,000 SD:

Neighboring lords demand loans/tribute

Bandit activity increases

Mercenary prices increase

79.2 Lords Notice Weakness

If the player's treasury drops below 500 SD:

Vassals become rebellious

Neighbors press claims

Trade partners demand upfront payment

79.3 Economic Ripples

Every major economic event creates ripples:

A new iron mine creates jobs → population grows → more taxes

A failed harvest causes famine → refugees flee → labor pool elsewhere increases

A sacked city floods the market with loot → prices drop → local producers suffer

79.4 Economic Crisis Triggers

Condition Effect

Treasury < Monthly Upkeep × 2 -1 Morale, -1 Loyalty all vassals

Treasury < Monthly Upkeep Roll 1d6 each week: 1-3 = one unit deserts

Treasury = 0 Army disbands, holdings rebel, neighbors invade

Food Stores < 2 weeks supply Starvation begins

Labor Pool < 50% of max -25% to all production, -1 population growth

79.5 Monthly Upkeep Summary

Item Cost

100 Soldiers (wages only) 40 SD/month

100 Soldiers (food, market price) 400 SD/month + 400 SU

1 Engineer 12 SD/month
1 Ship (River Sloop) 10 SD/month
Holding (Town) 15 SD/month + 50 SU food for pop
PART 80: BULK FOOD PROCUREMENT (Per Patch 11.1)

80.1 Core Principle

Buying food in bulk should be cheaper. Lords who plan ahead, negotiate contracts, and build supply networks should be rewarded with more stable campaigns.

80.2 Bulk Purchase Tiers

Tier	Quantity (FSU)	Discount	Price per FSU	Best For
Spot Market	1-10 FSU	0%	100 SD	Emergency, small garrisons
Bulk Order	11-50 FSU	-10%	90 SD	Monthly supplies, minor lords
Wholesale	51-200 FSU	-20%	80 SD	Campaign supplies, great lords
Contract	201-500 FSU	-30%	70 SD	Seasonal campaigns, armies
Strategic Reserve	500+ FSU	-40%	60 SD	Year-long wars, kingdoms

Example Costs

FSU Needed	Spot Price	Bulk (-10%)	Wholesale (-20%)	Contract (-30%)	Strategic (-40%)
------------	------------	-------------	------------------	-----------------	------------------

10 FSU	1,000 SD	900 SD	—	—	—
50 FSU	5,000 SD	4,500 SD	4,000 SD	—	—
200 FSU	20,000 SD	18,000 SD	16,000 SD	14,000 SD	—
500 FSU	50,000 SD	45,000 SD	40,000 SD	35,000 SD	30,000 SD

Savings: A great lord buying 200 FSU at wholesale saves 4,000 SD vs spot market — enough to pay 1,000 soldiers for an extra month.

80.3 Supply Contract Negotiation

Contract Terms:

Duration: 1 month, 1 season, 1 year

Volume: Fixed FSU per week/month

Price: Negotiated based on tier + modifiers

Delivery: To specified location(s)

Penalties: For late payment or non-delivery

Negotiation Roll: 1d6 + Merchant Reputation + Lord's Reputation + Opinion Modifier

Modifier	Amount
Merchant Reputation	+1 per 10 points
Lord's Reputation	+1 per 10 points
Opinion	+1 if +2 or higher
Previous contracts	+1 if successfully completed
Paying upfront	+2
War in region	-2 (sellers cautious)
Famine	-3 (no surplus)
Surplus harvest	+2 (sellers eager)

Result:

Roll Outcome

1-3 No contract. Spot market only.
4-5 Contract at current tier pricing
6 Contract at next tier pricing
7+ Contract at next tier + 5% additional discount

80.4 Supply Depot System

Depot Type	Cost	Storage Capacity	Monthly Upkeep	Build Time
Small Granary	200 SD	50 FSU	5 SD	1 month
Large Granary	500 SD	200 FSU	15 SD	3 months
Military Supply Depot	1,000 SD	500 FSU	40 SD	6 months

Regional Supply Network 5,000 SD 2,000 FSU (multiple depots) 200 SD 1 year
Effects:

Food stored in depots does not spoil

Depots reduce transport costs by 50% for final leg

Armies can resupply from depots in 1 day instead of waiting for caravans

Depots count toward Sustainable Garrison

80.5 Transport Economics

Transport Mode	Cost per 100 SU	per 100 miles	Speed
----------------	-----------------	---------------	-------

Wagon (road)	10 SD	12 miles/day
--------------	-------	--------------	--

River barge (downstream)	4 SD	30 miles/day
--------------------------	------	--------------	--

River barge (upstream)	8 SD	15 miles/day
------------------------	------	--------------	--

Coastal ship	6 SD	60 miles/day
--------------	------	--------------	--

Pack animal (no road)	15 SD	8 miles/day
-----------------------	-------	-------------	--

Volume Discount: Transport costs also have bulk tiers (same as food pricing)

80.6 Strategic Buying – Market Impact

Large purchases affect local markets:

Purchase Size vs Market Capacity	Price Impact
----------------------------------	--------------

< 10% of market	No effect
-----------------	-----------

10-25% of market	+10% to future prices (temporary)
------------------	-----------------------------------

26-50% of market	+25% to future prices, possible shortage
------------------	--

> 50% of market	Market collapse, -50% availability for 1d6 months
-----------------	---

80.7 Foraging Integration

Foraging reduces purchased food needs:

Terrain	Max % of food from foraging
---------	-----------------------------

Plains	30%
--------	-----

Forest	50%
--------	-----

Hills	25%
-------	-----

Mountains	10%
-----------	-----

Enemy territory (pillaging)	Up to 75% (with morale cost)
-----------------------------	------------------------------

Foraged food costs: 0 SD, but requires:

Time (slows army)

Scouts

Risk of ambush

80.8 Supply Line Interdiction

Enemies can target supply lines:

Action	Effect on Supply
--------	------------------

Raid supply wagons	Lose 1d6 × 10% of monthly supply
--------------------	----------------------------------

Block river	+50% transport time, +100% cost
-------------	---------------------------------

Capture depot	Lose all stored food, enemy gains it
---------------	--------------------------------------

Harass foragers	-50% foraging yield
-----------------	---------------------

Defending supply lines:

Assign troops as guards

Build fortified depots

Use multiple routes

Scout ahead

PART 81: THE BLACK MARKET (Per Patch 9.11)

81.1 Access Roll

Roll 1d6 + modifiers vs DC:

Settlement DC
Village 4
Town 6
City 8
Capital 10
Modifiers:

Have criminal contacts: -2 DC

Known to authorities: +2 DC

Previous black market dealings: -1 DC per successful transaction

81.2 Black Market Prices

Legitimate Price	Black Market (Buy)	Black Market (Sell)
------------------	--------------------	---------------------

----	-------------	-------------

1.5x	0.8x - 1.2x	0.5x - 0.9x
------	-------------	-------------

2x	1.2x - 1.8x	0.8x - 1.3x
----	-------------	-------------

81.3 Detection Roll

After any black market transaction, roll 1d6 + Settlement Size:

Settlement	Modifier
------------	----------

Town	+1
------	----

City	+2
------	----

Capital	+3
---------	----

Roll	Result
------	--------

1-3	Undetected

4-5	Suspicion (watched, future transactions +1 DC)
-----	--

6	Watched (caught if transacting again within 1 month)
---	--

7+	Caught (authorities confiscate goods, possible imprisonment)
----	--

81.4 Black Market Goods Available

Roll 1d6 for available goods:

Roll	Goods Type	Examples

85.5 Claim Persistence

Claims do not expire. A house may press a claim generations later, though strength may diminish over time.

85.6 Succession Crisis – When No Clear Heir Exists

A Succession Crisis begins when a ruler dies and no clear heir can be identified through normal succession.

Triggers:

Ruler dies with no living children

Ruler dies with no living siblings

All potential heirs are underage (under 16) with no regent designated

Multiple claimants have equal strength claims

The late ruler's will is disputed or missing

Assassination with no clear perpetrator

Immediate Effects:

All loyalty scores to the late ruler become 0

All vassals must choose sides within 1d6 weeks

Neighboring realms gain claim to border territories

85.7 Civil War Phases

85.9 Choosing Sides

When a succession crisis begins, each vassal must choose a side (or declare independence).

Side Selection Roll (1d6 + Modifiers)

Base DC: 4

Modifier Effect

+2 Claimant has strong blood claim

+1 Claimant has moderate claim

-1 Claimant has weak claim

+2 Vassal has blood ties to claimant

+1 Vassal has marriage ties to claimant

-2 Vassal has blood feud with claimant's house

+1 Claimant offers major concessions

-1 Claimant demands tribute

+1 per Tier Claimant's military strength (max +3)

Results:

Roll	Outcome
------	---------

1-3	Joins opposing faction
-----	------------------------

4-5	Declares neutrality (may switch later)
-----	--

6+	Joins claimant's faction
----	--------------------------

Neutrality: Neutral vassals may be pressured, bribed, or attacked by either side. Each season, roll 1d6: on 1-2, they join a side (decide randomly).

85.10 Regency

If the heir is underage (under 16), a regent rules until they come of age.

Regent Selection:

Usually the closest adult relative

May be specified in the late ruler's will

May be chosen by council vote

May be contested by rivals

Regent Powers:

Controls all military forces

Collects all revenues

Makes all decisions

Must abdicate when heir comes of age

Regent Risks:

May usurp the throne

May be assassinated

May be unpopular with vassals

May face succession crisis anyway

85.11 Claim Wars

When multiple claimants press their claims, war is likely. Claim wars follow civil war rules (85.7) with these modifiers:

Situation	Modifier
-----------	----------

Claimant has strong claim	+2 to side selection rolls
---------------------------	----------------------------

Claimant has foreign backing	+1 to military rolls
------------------------------	----------------------

Claimant is popular with smallfolk	+1 to levy recruitment
------------------------------------	------------------------

85.12 Marriage Claim Strategy

A house may gain claims through strategic marriages:

Marry the daughter of a title holder → children have claim

Marry the widow of a title holder → may claim through her

Marry a claimant → combine claims

85.13 Claim Renunciation

A claimant may renounce their claim. This:

Removes them from succession

May be demanded as peace terms

May be temporary or permanent

Cannot be undone without reconfirmation

85.14 Extinct House Inheritance

If a noble house goes extinct (no living members), its lands and titles:

Revert to the liege lord

May be claimed by cadet branches

May be seized by neighbors

May become disputed territory

85.15 Claim Memory

The system remembers all claims, even if not currently pressed. Ancient claims may resurface generations later.

85.16 Kinslaying and Inheritance (Per Patch 7.23)

A kinslayer cannot inherit anything from the victim. Additionally:

Situation	Effect
-----------	--------

Kinslayer was next in line	Line passes to next eligible relative
----------------------------	---------------------------------------

Kinslayer has children	Children may inherit only if they publicly denounce parent
------------------------	--

Kinslayer is already ruling	Rule is considered illegitimate. Vassals may rebel.
-----------------------------	---

Victim had no other heirs	Title goes to liege lord or nearest collateral line
---------------------------	---

Victim's spouse remarries	Children of new marriage take precedence
---------------------------	--

The Tainted Blood: Some cultures believe the kinslayer's children are also tainted. They may be passed over for inheritance even if innocent.

85.17 Council and Succession (Per Patch 7.31)

If a great lord dies without a clear heir, the council may have a role.

Situation	Council Role
-----------	--------------

Clear heir exists	Council confirms, may advise regent
-------------------	-------------------------------------

Disputed succession	Council may choose – or split, causing civil war
---------------------	--

No heir	Council may elect new lord from among their houses
---------	--

Lord assassinated	Council investigates, may seek vengeance
-------------------	--

Council Election: If the council chooses a new lord, that lord owes them.

Council seats become permanent, power shifts.

PART 86: HEIR CONTINUATION SYSTEM (Pages 194-196)

- 2 Marry into a specific house
- 3 Destroy a rival house
- 4 Gain wealth
- 5 Gain religious favor
- 6 Become king

PART 94: THE SCHEMER (Per Patch 7.26)

94.1 Core Principle – The Breaking

A Schemer is not born. They are made. Made by betrayal, by loss, by humiliation so complete that the person they were dies – and something else crawls out of the wreckage.

A Schemer is:

Patient (they will wait years, decades)

Cunning (they see moves others miss)

Unreadable (their face shows nothing)

Dangerous (they have nothing left to lose)

A Schemer is not:

Obvious (you will not see them coming)

Forgiving (they remember every slight)

Satisfied (revenge is never enough)

Safe (they will burn the world to warm their hands)

94.2 Trigger Condition – Vanishingly Rare

At the start of each year, for every noble lord in the world who has a grudge, the system makes a silent roll.

Condition Modifier

Base chance 0.5%

Grudge is against blood relative +2%

Grudge has lasted 5+ years +1%

Grudge has lasted 10+ years +2%

Lord has lost land/family/title to grudge +2%

Lord has been publicly humiliated +1%

Lord is already a Schemer Cannot trigger again

Final Chance: 1d100. If the result is less than or equal to the modified chance, the lord gains the Schemer trait.

The system does not announce this roll. The player will only know if they are the target – or if the region begins to destabilize.

94.3 The Schemer's Stats

Attribute Effect

Patience +2 to all long-term plot rolls (plans taking 6+ months)

Cunning +2 to espionage rolls, +2 to framing others

Unreadable -2 to others' attempts to read their intentions

Grudge Multiplier Their grudge is now permanent. Cannot be resolved by apology or restitution.

Network Automatically gains 1d6 spies within 1 year (if none existed)

94.4 The Schemer's Goal – Regional Destabilization

A Schemer does not just target their enemy. They target the entire region. They want to watch it burn.

Each year, a Schemer activates 1d3 of the following plots:

Plot Effect

Spread Lies -1 Opinion between two random lords in the region

Blackmail One minor lord becomes secretly loyal to Schemer

Sabotage Trade One trade route is disrupted (-50% income for 1d6 months)

Frame Noble One lord is accused of a crime (real or false)

Assassination Attempt Target a noble (use Part 95)

Foment Rebellion Peasants in one holding become restless (-1 loyalty)

Secret Alliance Two lords are secretly allied against a third (unknown)

Murder Kill a minor noble (if assassination succeeds)

Theft Steal important document/heirloom, use as leverage

Each plot is resolved silently. The player sees only the effects – the rumors, the betrayals, the sudden deaths.

94.5 The Web – How the Schemer Works

A Schemer does not act alone. They build a web.

Web Element Description

Spies 1d6 informants across the region

Blackmailed Lords 1d3 minor lords who owe them

False Friends 1d3 lords who think the Schemer is an ally

Contingencies 1d3 plans that trigger if they are discovered

Hidden Resources 1d6 × 100 SD stashed in secret locations

If the Schemer is discovered:

They do not confess

They do not flee

They activate contingencies

Contingency Examples:

A letter revealing another lord's secret is released

A hired assassin targets the accuser

Evidence is planted on a rival

The Schemer "disappears" and starts again elsewhere

94.6 Regional Instability Track

As the Schemer works, the region becomes unstable.

Level Effects

1-2 Minor rumors. -1 to trade.

3-4 Lords suspicious. -1 Opinion between all pairs.

5-6 Trade disrupted. -25% regional income.

7-8 Assassinations become common. Roll 1d6 each month: on 1, a noble dies.

9-10 Open conflict. Civil war possible. Roll 1d6 each season: on 1-2, war breaks out.

Each successful Schemer plot increases instability by 1.

Each failed plot (discovered, thwarted) increases instability by 1d3 (the revelation causes chaos).

94.7 Detecting the Schemer

Players and NPCs may attempt to discover who is behind the chaos.

Investigation Roll: 1d6 + Recon Rating + Espionage vs DC 15 + Schemer's Cunning

Success Information Gained

Fail No leads. The web holds.

Success You identify one of the Schemer's agents (spy, blackmailed lord)

Success by 5+ You identify the Schemer themselves

Success by 10+ You discover the full web (all agents, contingencies)

94.8 Confronting the Schemer

If the Schemer is confronted directly, they do not beg. They do not explain.

They smile – a thin, dead thing – and speak:

"You think this ends with me? I am already dead. I died the day [the grudge happened]. What stands before you is only the ghost of what they made. Kill me, and the web lives. My letters go out. My agents act. My plans unfold without me."

"You cannot win. You can only choose how much you lose."

Action Consequence

If killed All contingents activate simultaneously, 1d6 secrets revealed, instability increases by 2d6

If imprisoned Contingencies activate one by one, over months. The Schemer waits. Escape is possible.

If exiled The Schemer leaves... but where? They may return in years, with new plans.

94.9 Cultural Reactions to Schemers

Culture View on Schemers

Central Plains Dishonorable. A knight does not scheme. But they respect the cunning, privately.

Western Rivers Practical. Scheming is just business by other means.

Eastern Forests (Settled) Uncomfortable. The forest has its own ways. This feels... wrong.

Eastern Forests (Tribal) The ancestors weep. A soul so broken cannot join them.

Southern Mountains The mountain remembers. The Schemer will be remembered too – as a warning.

Northern Snowlands Respect. The cold teaches patience. A Schemer is just very, very patient.

Nomad Steppe (Traditional) Confused. Why not just fight? Why hide?

Nomad Steppe (Settled) Cautious respect. They understand patience. They do not trust it.

94.10 The Schemer's End – Possible Outcomes

Outcome Description

Victory The Schemer achieves their goal. Enemy destroyed. Region in ruins. They sit alone, smiling. Was it worth it?

Death Killed by enemy, by accident, by their own web. The region breathes – but scars remain.

Madness The scheming consumes them. They see plots everywhere. They become paranoid, useless.

Redemption Rare. Someone reaches them. Shows them another way. The broken pieces try to heal. (Almost impossible.)

Disappearance They vanish. The web lives on without them. No one knows if they are dead or waiting.

PART 95: ASSASSINATION SYSTEM (Pages 227-233 + Per Patch 7.26)

95.1 Core Principle

Murder is a dishonorable last resort. Assassination is never a casual action. Attempting murder immediately creates a Dishonor Risk against the house if discovered.

95.2 Murder Plot Creation

95.11 NPC Assassination Plots

NPCs may also plot assassinations against the player or other NPCs. These are resolved using the same mechanics, hidden from the player until they succeed or are discovered.

PART 96: THE KINSLAYER'S CURSE (Per Patch 7.23)

96.1 Core Principle

Kinslaying is not just murder. It is the violation of blood, of family, of the fundamental bond that holds society together. A kinslayer is marked for life – by gods, by men, by the very earth they walk on.

When a character kills a blood relative (parent, child, sibling, spouse by marriage counts as blood), they gain the permanent trait: KINSLAYER.

This is not a reputation that can be changed. It can only be:

Endured

Avenged

Forgotten (never)

Redeemed (impossible)

96.2 The Kinslayer's Reputation Score

Reputation Effect Modifier

Base Opinion with all who know -3 (permanent)

Additional if kinslaying was for power -2

Additional if kinslaying was accidental -1 (still cursed)

Additional if kinslaying was in self-defense 0 (but still cursed)

Additional if kinslaying was witnessed publicly -2

Additional if kinslaying was hidden but discovered -3

Minimum Opinion Cap: No character with the Kinslayer trait can have an Opinion higher than +1 with anyone who knows.

96.3 The Gods Remember

Faith Reaction

Crownbound Church Excommunication. No burial in consecrated ground. Priests refuse last rites.

Ashen Covenant "The king fell because the realm was corrupt. You are proof." +1 to fear, -3 to trust.

Silent Faith Silence. They do not speak to you. They do not look at you. You are dead to them.

Tribal Spirits The ancestors wail. You will never receive their guidance again.

Nomad Sky Your name is removed from the clan. You are wind. You are nothing.

96.4 Cultural Views on Kinslaying

Central Plains – The Broken Oath of Blood

"Blood is the first oath. Before lord, before king, before god – family. Break that, and nothing you ever swear will be trusted again."

Punishment: Exile or execution

Accidental: Exile, monastery, penance

Legacy: Name stricken, children watched

Western Rivers – The Broken Contract

"You signed no contract with your brother. But blood is the oldest contract of all. Break it, and no one will sign with you again."

Punishment: Economic death, blacklist

Accidental: Severe fines, public apology

Legacy: No contracts, no loans, no trade

Eastern Forests (Settled) – The Hunter Who Preys on His Own Pack

"A wolf does not kill his brother. If he does, the pack drives him out. And the forest takes him."

Punishment: Cast out, no aid, death if return

Accidental: Year of silence, face tattoo

Legacy: Name forgotten, family may change name

Eastern Forests (Tribal) – The Ancestors Scream

"The ancestors do not forget. They do not forgive. They wait. They watch. They remember."

Punishment: Immediate banishment

Accidental: Still banished, but offerings left

Legacy: Name never spoken, spirit wanders

Southern Mountains – The Mountain Remembers

"The mountain does not forget blood. It soaks into the stone. It becomes part of the rock. Every generation who walks this pass will feel it."

Punishment: Execution

Accidental: Exile, year of wandering, hand brand

Legacy: Place cursed, family watches children

Northern Snowlands – The Cold Beyond Cold

"The cold kills the weak. But kinslaying? That kills something else. Something the cold cannot touch. The soul."

Punishment: Cast out into winter

Accidental: Trial of Frost (3 days, no shelter)

Legacy: Shame lasts generations, names changed

Nomad Steppe (Traditional) – The Wind Does Not Carry Your Name

"We are the wind. We are the grass. We are the herd. One horse does not kill another. If it does, the herd drives it out. The wolves take it."

Punishment: Exile with nothing

Accidental: Still exile, but with horse and water

Legacy: Name erased, clan moves on

Nomad Steppe (Settled) – The Law and the Grass

"We have two laws now – the old and the new. Both say the same thing: do not kill your blood. The old law exiles you. The new law hangs you. Choose your death."

Punishment: Execution (settled) or exile (traditional)

Accidental: Prison (settled) or exile with supplies (trad)

Legacy: Family chooses which law to follow

96.5 Kinslaying and Inheritance

A kinslayer cannot inherit anything from the victim. Additionally:

Situation	Effect
-----------	--------

Kinslayer was next in line	Line passes to next eligible relative
----------------------------	---------------------------------------

Kinslayer has children	Children may inherit only if they publicly denounce parent
------------------------	--

Kinslayer is already ruling	Rule is considered illegitimate. Vassals may rebel.
-----------------------------	---

Victim had no other heirs	Title goes to liege lord or nearest collateral line
---------------------------	---

Victim's spouse remarries	Children of new marriage take precedence
---------------------------	--

The Tainted Blood: Some cultures believe the kinslayer's children are also tainted. They may be passed over for inheritance even if innocent.

96.6 Kinslaying Through Assassination

If an assassination target is a blood relative of the plotter:

Factor	Modifier
--------	----------

Discovery chance +3 (servants talk, family notices)
Evidence left Automatic (someone always knows)
Blood Feud trigger Automatic, permanent, multi-generational Reputation loss -5 (minimum)
If Discovered:

Immediate blood feud with entire family

No negotiation. No ransom. No mercy.

The plotter becomes the most hated person in the region

PART 97: THE LORD'S COUNCIL (Per Patch 7.31)

97.1 Core Principle

Every great lord (Tier 4+) has a council. It is not a modern cabinet of appointed experts. It is a living assembly of family representatives from the six most powerful minor houses sworn to him.

These council members are:

Blood relatives of the minor lords

Sent to represent their family's interests

Expected to advise, lobby, and sometimes obstruct

A check on the great lord's power

A source of wisdom – and conflict

97.2 Council Composition

Each great lord's council has six seats, one for each of the six most significant minor houses in their domain.

Seat	Representative	Family Role
First Seat	Most powerful minor house	Usually the lord's brother or eldest son
Second Seat	Second most powerful	Cousin or trusted uncle
Third Seat	Third most powerful	Experienced family member
Fourth Seat	Fourth most powerful	Ambitious younger son
Fifth Seat	Fifth most powerful	Elder statesman
Sixth Seat	Sixth most powerful	Wildcard – varies by house

97.3 Who Sits? Family Representatives

Relation	Typical Role
Brother	Trusted, speaks with the lord's full authority
Cousin	Reliable, may have own ambitions
Uncle	Experienced, often wiser than the lord
Nephew	Young, eager, learning
Son (not heir)	Ambitious, seeking influence
Grandfather (rare)	Ancient, respected, speaks rarely
Mother (rare)	If she holds wealth or influence
Daughter (rare)	If she is the power behind the house

97.4 Women on Council

Women rarely sit on councils – but it happens. Conditions:

Condition	Example
She holds significant personal wealth	A merchant princess or wealthy widow
She commands trained men	A warrior woman with her own retinue
She is the power behind the minor lord	The lord is weak; she rules
She is the last of her line	No male heirs
She is exceptionally wise or cunning	Her advice is too valuable to ignore

97.5 Council Powers

Power Description

Advise The lord may ask – or they may offer unbidden

Lobby Members push for policies that benefit their houses
Obstruct If united, they can delay or block action
Inform They bring news from their regions
Judge They watch the lord. If he falters, they remember.
Choose If the lord dies without clear heir, the council may have a voice
Unified Council: If all six members agree on a course of action, the lord faces a choice:

Accept their advice (+2 loyalty from all minor houses)

Reject their advice (-1 loyalty, risk of obstruction)

97.6 Council Dynamics

Dynamic	Effect
Allies	Two members support each other. +1 to lobbying.
Rivals	Two members oppose each other. -1 to council stability.
Feud	Members from feuding houses. Council may deadlock.
Faction	Three+ members form voting bloc. Can dominate.
Outsider	One member isolated. May seek lord's favor.

Council Stability Track:

Score Meaning

1-3 Constant infighting. -1 to all advice rolls.
4-6 Tense but functional. No modifier.
7-9 Cooperative. +1 to advice rolls.
10 Unified. Rare. Powerful. Dangerous to lord.

97.7 Losing a Seat – Blood in the Water

When a minor house loses its council seat, it is a public humiliation. Other houses notice. Predators circle.

Effect	Description
Reputation Loss	-2 to house reputation
Rival Houses	+1 aggression from other minor houses
Internal Strife	Family may blame the representative
Desperation	The house may take risks to regain favor
Succession Questions	Is this house still worth allying with?

97.8 Council Sessions

Session Type	Frequency	Purpose
Regular Session	Weekly/Monthly	Routine business, reports, minor decisions
War Council	As needed	Military strategy, levies, supplies
Crisis Session	Emergency	Invasion, rebellion, lord's illness
Feast Session	Seasonal	Celebrations, marriages, announcements

97.9 The Lord's Relationship with Council

Approach	Effect
Listen	Council feels valued. +1 stability.
Ignore	Council resents you. -1 stability. May obstruct.
Play Favorites	Favored houses +1 loyalty, others -1.
Pit Them Against Each Other	Keeps them weak, but stability drops.
Replace Members	Can remove individuals, but causes resentment.
Abolish Council	Possible? Yes. Wise? No. Rebellion likely.

97.10 Cultural Variations

Culture	Council Practice
Central Plains	Formal council. Six seats. Strict hierarchy. First Seat speaks first.
Western Rivers	Practical council. Seats based on wealth as much as land. Merchants may sit.
Eastern Forests (Settled)	Council exists, but less formal. Members roam, speak when moved.
Eastern Forests (Tribal)	No council. Elders speak for families, but not in a lord's hall. They do not gather this way.
Southern Mountains	Council is ancient. Seats are hereditary – a house that loses a seat loses it forever.
Northern Snowlands	Council is a circle. No head. The lord sits among them. All speak freely.

Nomad Steppe (Traditional) No council. The khan's brothers and sons advise – but they ride with him, not sit in a hall.

Nomad Steppe (Settled) Adapted council. Six seats, but members may be women (steppe tradition of female leaders).

97.11 Generating a Council

Step 1 – Select Six Minor Houses

Choose the six most powerful or loyal minor houses in the lord's domain.

Step 2 – For Each, Determine Representative

Roll 1d6:

Roll Representative

- 1 Lord's brother
- 2 Lord's cousin
- 3 Lord's uncle
- 4 Lord's nephew
- 5 Lord's son (not heir)
- 6 Special (grandfather, mother, daughter, etc.)

Step 3 – Determine Gender (if special)

Roll 1d6 for female representative (only if conditions met):

Roll Outcome

- 1-4 Male (standard)
- 5 Female (wealth/influence)
- 6 Female (exceptional – wise, cunning, warrior)

Step 4 – Generate Personality

Roll 1d6 for each member's disposition toward the lord:

Roll Disposition

- 1 Loyal supporter
- 2 Pragmatic ally
- 3 Neutral
- 4 Skeptical
- 5 Ambitious (wants more for his house)
- 6 Hostile (secretly works against lord)

Step 5 – Generate Relationships Between Members

Roll 1d6 for each pair (or use narrative):

Roll Relationship

- 1 Blood allies (same faction)
- 2 Friendly
- 3 Neutral
- 4 Rivals
- 5 Feuding
- 6 Secret alliance against another

97.12 Council and Succession

If a great lord dies without a clear heir, the council may have a role.

Situation Council Role

Clear heir exists Council confirms, may advise regent

Disputed succession Council may choose – or split, causing civil war

No heir Council may elect new lord from among their houses

Lord assassinated Council investigates, may seek vengeance

Council Election: If the council chooses a new lord, that lord owes them.

Council seats become permanent, power shifts.

PART 98: THE PLAYER ON COUNCIL (Per Patch 7.32)

98.1 Players as Council Members

A player who holds land as a minor lord (Tier 2-3) may be granted a seat on their liege's council if they are among the six most powerful or favored houses in the domain.

Gaining a Seat:

Method Description

Inheritance Your house already holds a seat; you take it

Favor Your liege grants you a seat due to exceptional service

Conquest You defeat a house that holds a seat

Purchase Rare, but coin can buy influence

Marriage Marry into a house that holds a seat

98.2 Player's Representative on Council

If the player holds a council seat but cannot attend a session personally, they may send a representative.

Who May Represent:

Representative Acceptance Notes

Blood relative Acceptable Family speaks with family's voice

Spouse Acceptable (if respected) Especially if they hold influence

Retainer Suspicious "You send a servant to advise me?"

Mercenary Unacceptable "I do not take counsel from sellswords."

No one Better than bad choice Absence is noted, but not insulting

The Great Lord's Reaction:

Lord's Personality Reaction to Blood Relative Reaction to Retainer

Patient, understanding Accepts, -0 loyalty -1 loyalty

Proud, traditional -1 loyalty -2 loyalty

Paranoid, suspicious -2 loyalty -3 loyalty

Pragmatic, focused Accepts if competent Accepts grudgingly

98.3 War Council – The Lord's Second

In times of war, the council transforms. It becomes a War Council – and the rules change.

War Council Attendance:

Who Attendance Rule

The great lord Must attend

Minor lords Expected to attend personally

Council members Expected to attend personally

Representatives Not allowed in War Council

The Exception – The Lord's Second:

If a minor lord cannot attend a War Council personally, they may send a Second – but only if that Second is:

Acceptable Second Condition

Blood relative Must be of age and capable

Trusted commander Must have proven themselves in battle

The lord's heir Acceptable, even encouraged

Unacceptable Seconds:

Stewards (non-combatants)

Servants

Anyone who has never fought

Anyone the great lord does not know

98.4 The Suspicion

Great lords view absence from War Council with deep suspicion.

Situation Reaction

First absence, good reason -1 loyalty, "See that it does not happen again."

Second absence, any reason -2 loyalty, "Your lord tests my patience."

Third absence -3 loyalty, possible loss of seat

Absence during crisis Automatic -2 loyalty, possible accusations of cowardice

98.5 Player as Second for Another Lord

A player may be asked to serve as Second for their liege or another minor lord.

Role Effect

Represent your liege +1 favor with liege, but you speak for him – carefully
Represent fellow minor lord +1 relation with that house, but you carry their risk

Represent yourself? You cannot – you are either the lord or the second
If the player serves as Second:

They have full voting/advising rights for that session

They are treated as the lord they represent

They are personally responsible for any offense given

If they perform well, they gain reputation

If they perform poorly, they harm their lord's standing

98.6 Political Consequences of Absence

Consequence Effect

Rumors spread "Lord [Name] sends others to speak for him. Is he weak? Ill? Afraid?"

Rivals gain ground Your absence is their opportunity to lobby against you.

Decisions made without you Policies that harm your interests may pass.

Loyalty drops Your liege wonders if you are committed.

Seat at risk If you miss too many sessions, another house may claim your place.

Missed Sessions in a Row:

Missed Sessions Effect

1 -1 opinion from liege

2 -2 opinion, rivals +1 to lobbying

3 -3 opinion, liege may demand explanation

4+ Seat may be declared vacant; roll 1d6: 1-3 = lose seat

98.7 Cultural Variations on Attendance

Culture View on Attendance View on Seconds

Central Plains Personal attendance expected. Absence is weakness. Seconds barely tolerated. Blood relatives only.

Western Rivers Practical. Send someone competent. Acceptable if competent. Suspicion if incompetent.

Eastern Forests (Settled) Preferred, but understood. Acceptable. "The forest has its own demands."

Eastern Forests (Tribal) No councils. N/A. N/A.

Southern Mountains Ancestors watch. Attend or dishonor your line. Blood only. No exceptions.

Northern Snowlands Attend if you can. If not, send someone who can fight. Seconds must be warriors.

Nomad Steppe (Traditional) No councils. N/A. N/A.

Nomad Steppe (Settled) Adapted. Attendance valued, but understood. Acceptable if capable.

99.5 The Nature of Regions – Borders That Breathe

Regions do not change at a line on a map. They transition. A traveler leaving the Central Plains for the Eastern Forest does not step from grassland to deep wood at a single step. First, the grass grows taller, then scrub appears, then scattered trees, then thin forest, then finally the ancient canopy. These transition zones are where cultures blend, where border lords hold sway, and where travelers must be most alert. A day's travel can take you through three distinct ecological zones – and three different political realities.

99.6 Border Zones – Where Regions Meet

Every border between regions has a transition depth of 1-3 days of travel where the landscape gradually changes.

Transition Depth Table

Border	Transition Days	Primary Change
Central Plains – Western Rivers	2 days	Grass gives way to marshes, then open water
Central Plains – Eastern Forests	3 days	Grass – scrub – scattered trees – forest
Central Plains – Southern Mountains	2 days	Plains rise into foothills, then mountains
Central Plains – Northern Snowlands	3 days	Grass thins, cools, becomes tundra, then snow
Western Rivers – Eastern Forests	2 days	Marshes become swamp forest, then dry forest
Western Rivers – Southern Mountains	2 days	River valleys narrow, rise into highlands
Western Rivers – Northern Snowlands	3 days	Rivers slow, freeze part-year, tundra appears
Eastern Forests – Southern Mountains	2 days	Forest thins, climbs, becomes alpine
Eastern Forests – Northern Snowlands	3 days	Deciduous gives way to coniferous, then taiga
Southern Mountains – Northern Snowlands	4 days	High peaks gradually lower into frozen hills
Nomad Steppe – Any region	2-4 days	Grass slowly changes to destination terrain

Transition Zone Effects:

Effect	Description
Mixed Terrain	Treat as both regions for travel purposes (use slower rate)
Border Markets	50% chance of trading post; goods from both regions
Cultural Blend	Architecture, clothing, cuisine mix both cultures

The bridge is fortified with towers at both ends, and a small castle perches on the island at its center. Northern Introduction Table (1d6):

Roll	Opening Phrase	Deed Style	Closing

Under his reign, no one starves. Under his word, no oath is broken. Under his banner, all peoples stand as one. All hail the Emperor!"

Response: "ALL HAIL!"

PART 102: THOSE WHO FOLLOW THE HERDS – COMPLETE TRIBAL LORE (Pages 503-517 + Per Mega Patch 6.0)

102.1 Core Principle – They Were Never Lost

The lords tell stories about the tribes. They always have. In those stories, the tribes are "lost" – lost to civilization, lost to progress, lost to the old ways that sensible people abandoned generations ago.

The tribes do not tell those stories.

They tell different ones. In their stories, they were never lost. They knew exactly where they were. They knew where the herds went, where the water ran, where the hidden valleys waited. They knew the land in ways the lords could never understand, because the lords never asked. They only took.

When the lords came – from the north, the south, the west – the tribes watched. They saw the first refugees stagger out of the snowlands, starving and desperate. They saw the traders sail up the rivers, greedy and clever. They saw the conquerors ride across the plains, cruel and certain.

The tribes could have fought. Sometimes they did. But fighting every newcomer would have drained them, and the land had taught them patience. So they did something the lords could not understand: they withdrew.

Not in fear. Not in defeat. In choice.

They walked away from the grass the conquerors wanted. They left the river bends the traders coveted. They abandoned the valleys the refugees settled. They went to places the lords would never find – hidden hunting grounds, secret valleys, high pastures that existed on no map.

The lords thought they had won. They thought the tribes were gone, broken, finished.

The tribes laughed in their tents and said nothing.

Let the lords build their castles. Let them fight their wars. Let them count their coins and swear their oaths and die for their kings. The tribes would wait. The land would wait. The herds would wait.

And when the lords finally needed something they could not get from their castles – furs for winter, knowledge of hidden passes, warriors who could move like shadows – the tribes would still be there. Watching. Waiting. Remembering.

They are not lost. They are exactly where they have always been.

102.2 The Coming of the Lords – Three Migrations

102.2.1 The Northern Refugees: Those Who Came Cold

The Story the Lords Tell:

Generations ago, the Northern Snowlands grew too harsh even for their hardy people. Families packed what they could and walked south, seeking warmer lands, better hunting, a chance to survive. They found the Central Plains. They found grass, game, rivers. The land seemed empty, and so they settled. They built their halls along the rivers. They became the Northern lords.

The Story the Tribes Tell:

A band of starving people came out of the snow. They had nothing – no food, no knowledge of the land, no idea how to survive. The tribes watched from the forest edge and decided to help. Not because they were kind – kindness is for those who can afford it. They helped because the starving ones had children, and children can learn. They taught the newcomers where to find water, how to follow the herds, which roots fed and which killed. The newcomers learned. They survived. They settled along the rivers – not taking, just staying. The tribes did not mind. There was room enough.

Then more came. And more. And they stopped being grateful. They started building, fencing, claiming. They forgot who had taught them to survive.

The tribes could have fought. Instead, they moved. There were always other valleys, other hunting grounds, other places the newcomers had not found. The tribes went there and let the newcomers have the river bends.

The newcomers thought they had won. They called themselves lords. They forgot the faces of the people who had saved them.

The tribes did not forget. They never forget.

102.2.2 The Western Traders: Those Who Came by Water

The Story the Lords Tell:

Brave explorers from the western kingdoms sailed up the great rivers, seeking new lands, new trade, new wealth. They found a wild country rich in furs and timber. They built trading posts at river confluences, forts on high ground. They traded fairly with the simple folk they found, bringing iron and cloth in exchange for hides and knowledge. Over time, the trading posts became towns. The towns became cities. The traders became lords. They brought civilization to a savage land.

The Story the Tribes Tell:

The river people saw the boats long before they arrived. Strange vessels, high-sided, moving against the current with oars and sails. The people watched from the reeds and wondered. When the boats landed, the strangers did not attack. They offered gifts – shiny metal, colored cloth, things the people had never seen. They wanted furs. They wanted to trade. The river people were suspicious, but curious. They traded. A few hides for a few knives. It seemed fair.

The strangers stayed. They built posts at the river bends – small at first, then larger. They brought more goods, more traders, more strange customs. Some married into the river people. Some learned the language. Some seemed almost like kin.

But they never stopped wanting more. More furs. More hides. More land. More control. When the river people objected, the traders called on their lords. Armed men came up the river. They did not ask this time. They took.

The river people could have fought. Instead, they faded into the countless streams, the shallow waters where the big boats could not follow. They went to places the traders would never find – hidden lakes, marsh villages, camps on islands that existed on no map.

The traders thought they had won. They called the rivers theirs. They built their cities on the banks and forgot the people who had shown them the way.

The river people did not forget. They wait in the reeds, watching. The big boats cannot follow. The marshes remember.

102.2.3 The Southern Conquerors: Those Who Came on Horses

The Story the Lords Tell:

Great warriors from the southern kingdoms rode north on magnificent horses, seeking glory, seeking land, seeking a kingdom of their own. They found a rich plain, empty of civilization, ripe for the taking. They conquered it in a single generation, building castles on the best grass, establishing laws where there had been none. They brought order to chaos. They became the High Kings.

The Story the Tribes Tell:

The plains people felt the thunder long before they saw the riders. The ground trembled. The herds scattered. Something terrible was coming.

Then they came – men on horses, strange beasts that ran faster than any runner, carried men farther than any walker. The riders had iron swords, iron discipline, iron hearts. They did not ask. They did not trade. They took.

They took the best grass. They took the watering holes. They took the places where the herds gathered. They built castles on the ancient hunting grounds and said: "This is ours now."

The plains people fought. They had bows and courage and knowledge of the land. They killed many riders. But the riders kept coming, more and more, and the horses gave them speed the people could not match.

The elders gathered. They made a choice that broke their hearts: they would leave. They would go to places the riders could not follow – the deep valleys, the high pastures, the hidden places where horses could not go.

They walked away from their ancestral grounds. They left the grass to the conquerors. They went into the margins and survived.

The conquerors thought they had won. They built their castles. They crowned their kings. They forgot that the land had owners before them.

The plains people did not forget. They wait in the high places, watching. The horses will age. The castles will crumble. The grass will remember who loved it first.

102.3 The Hidden Places

The lords have maps. Beautiful maps, drawn with care, showing every castle, every road, every river. They think their maps show everything. They do not.

The hidden places do not appear on any lordly map. They cannot be found by scouts. They cannot be reached by armies. They exist in the spaces between, known only to those born there and those trusted to find them.

102.3.1 The High Pastures

Above the tree line, where the air thins and the wind never stops, there are valleys that hold grass all summer. The herds come here to calve. The people come here to hunt. The lords never follow – their horses cannot breathe the thin air, their soldiers cannot climb the steep approaches.

Mechanical:

Reaching the high pastures requires 3x normal travel time

Horses cannot enter

+2 to hunting rolls during summer

102.3.2 The Deep Forest Glades

In the heart of the great forest, where the trees grow so thick that sunlight barely reaches the ground, there are clearings that exist on no map. They are surrounded by impenetrable brush, reachable only by paths that shift with the seasons.

Mechanical:

+4 to detection threshold for these glades

Scouts simply cannot find them without a guide

+2 to ambush rolls for anyone defending these places

102.3.3 The Marsh Islands

The great wetlands stretch for miles – water, reeds, mud, islands of solid ground that rise just above the waterline. The channels between them shift with every flood. The river people navigate these channels in their shallow canoes.

Mechanical:

Only canoes can navigate the marshes

River ships cannot enter

+2 to defense when attacked in the marshes

102.3.4 The River Caves

Behind certain waterfalls, where the water thunders down and spray hides everything, there are caves. Some are small. Some are vast – underground chambers that hold whole communities. The entrances are underwater, reachable only by diving.

Mechanical:

These caves are not on any map

They cannot be found without a guide

Have sheltered refugees for generations

102.3.5 The Shield Rock Mazes

In the ancient stone lands, where glaciers scraped the rock into labyrinths of ridge and ravine, there are places where the stone creates natural mazes. Only those born here know the paths.

Mechanical:

Movement is 4x normal for anyone without a guide

-4 to all reconnaissance rolls

The land itself confuses outsiders

102.4 Hidden Valley Generation (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

102.8 What Lords Notice When Tribes Unite (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

When the tribes unite, these hidden places become known. Roll 1d6 for each adjacent region:

Roll Lords Notice

1	Nothing – too busy with own problems
2	Rumors only – unconfirmed
3	Scouts report locations – interest piqued
4	Envoy sent – negotiations begin
5	Claims made – 'that land is ours by right'
6	Armies march – they want it now

102.9 Unity Cost/Benefit – Tribes (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

Unity Benefits	Unity Costs
----------------	-------------

Largest hidden army in the realm	All hidden places become known
Coordinated resistance to lord expansion	Lords take interest in tribal lands
Shared resources and knowledge	Traditional ways disrupted by unity
Single voice in negotiations	Old grudges between tribes must be suppressed
Possible High Sachem	Succession becomes more complex

102.10 Tribal Population

At campaign start, generate tribal population:

Region	Tribal Population
--------	-------------------

Eastern Forests	6d6 × 1000
-----------------	------------

Western Rivers (eastern edge)	2d6 × 1000
-------------------------------	------------

Central Plains (southern highlands)	2d6 × 1000
-------------------------------------	------------

Southern Mountains	1d6 × 1000
--------------------	------------

Northern Snowlands	1d6 × 1000
--------------------	------------

Total tribal population is enough to matter – enough to tip a war, enough to destroy a caravan, enough to make a lord's life very difficult.

When fully united, the tribal nations outnumber the lords of the Eastern Forests 3 to 1.

102.11 Tribal Military (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

Tribal warriors do not fight like lords. They strike from cover, vanish, strike again. They know every fold of the land. They move where armies cannot.

Band Size	Warriors	Raiding Parties	Special
Small (100-300)	20-60	10-30	+2 stealth
Medium (300-800)	60-160	30-80	+1 stealth
Large (800-1500)	160-300	80-150	0 stealth

When a lord draws the tribes into conflict:

Action	Consequence
Caravans on forest roads	1d6 raids per season
Scouts in tribal territory	50% never return
Supplies in transit	25% spoiled or stolen
Messengers	1 in 3 intercepted
Border villages	1d3 raided per season
Armies in unfamiliar terrain	+2 to ambush rolls
Morale of lord's troops	-1 from constant harassment

102.12 The Lines That Cannot Be Crossed

Action	Tribal Response
Discovering a hidden valley	The scout does not return
Killing a sacred animal	Blood price demanded; if not paid, blood feud
Breaking a trade agreement	No further trade. Caravans raided.
Taking children as wards or hostages	War. The tribe will not rest until the child returns.
Fencing the calving grounds	War on the herds. War on the lord.
Cutting old-growth forest	The trees will be avenged.

Escalation:

First offense: A warning. A dead animal left at the lord's gate.

Second offense: A raid. A caravan taken. A village granary burned.

Third offense: War. The lord's people die until the lord understands.

102.13 Corrected Flavor Text – The Tribal Voice (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

text
"They look at the river's edge and see water.
They look at the highlands and see empty hills.
They do not see us. They have never seen us.
But we see them. We have always seen them.
From every valley, every glade, every hidden place
they do not know exists – we watch.
If we ever rise together, they will learn what it means to be outnumbered in their own land.
But rising together means showing ourselves.
And once seen, we can never be unseen again."

– Elder of the Hidden Vale

PART 103: THE STEPPE NATIONS – COMPLETE NOMAD LORE (Pages 517-526 + Per Mega Patch 6.0)

103.1 Core Principle – The Grass Sea

The steppe is not a place that can be owned. It is a sea of grass, and like the ocean, it belongs to no one and everyone. Those who try to fence it, to claim it, to build walls upon it – they do not understand. The grass will grow over their walls. The wind will erase their names.

The nomads do not own the steppe. They belong to it. They follow the grass, the water, the herds. Their homes move with the seasons. Their wealth walks on four legs. Their ancestors ride the wind.

103.2 Population

Region	Nomad Population
Nomad Steppe	8d6 × 1000
Central Plains (trade camps)	1d6 × 100
Western Rivers (river markets)	1d6 × 100
Eastern Forests	None

Southern Mountains None

Northern Snowlands None

103.3 The Call of the Grass

A nomad away from the steppe for more than one year must roll 1d6 each season:

Roll	Result
------	--------

1-2	Growing restlessness (-1 Morale, -1 to all actions until return)
-----	--

3-4	No effect yet
-----	---------------

5-6	Adapting – may stay longer (reset clock)
-----	--

After three years, if still away, the nomad is considered lost to the grass.

They may settle, or they may simply never go home. They are no longer truly of the steppe.

103.4 Why Nomads Leave the Steppe

Reason	Numbers	Duration
Trade Small caravans	(20-50)	Seasonal (spring/autumn)
Mercenary work	Warbands (30-100)	Contract length, then return
Exile Individuals or families		Permanent – cannot return

Diplomacy Small delegations Short-term

Exploration Scouts (5-10) Temporary, rare

103.5 The Way of the Steppe – Cultural Values (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

The Horse Bond

A nomad without a horse is not a nomad. The bond is sacred.

Bond Level	Meaning	Game Effect
------------	---------	-------------

Foal-bonded	Raised horse from birth	+2 to mounted rolls, horse will die for rider
-------------	-------------------------	---

Battle-bonded	Survived battles together	+1 mounted, horse less likely to flee
---------------	---------------------------	---------------------------------------

Trade horse Bought, practical Standard mount

Horseless No horse -1 to all rolls (shame), not considered adult

Hospitality

A stranger at the tent must be fed before their name is asked.

Action	Effect
--------	--------

Feed stranger without asking	+1 reputation among nomads
------------------------------	----------------------------

Ask name before feeding	-1 reputation (dangerous, rude)
-------------------------	---------------------------------

Refuse hospitality	Blood feud possible
--------------------	---------------------

Silence

Silence is not empty. It is communication.

Silence Length	Meaning
----------------	---------

Short pause	Considering, respect
-------------	----------------------

Long pause (shared fire)	Deep trust, no words needed
--------------------------	-----------------------------

Long pause (stranger)	Judgment, testing
-----------------------	-------------------

Silence after question You have answered poorly; try again

103.6 The Warrior's Path – Earning a Name (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

A nomad does not receive a war name. They earn it.

Deed	Name Example	Recognition
------	--------------	-------------

First kill in battle	"[Name] Slayer"	Acknowledged by clan
----------------------	-----------------	----------------------

Capture 10+ horses in raid	"[Name] Herd-Taker"	Known in region
----------------------------	---------------------	-----------------

Save a clanmate's life	"[Name] Life-Giver"	Respected
------------------------	---------------------	-----------

Ride 3 days without rest	"[Name] Far-Rider"	Noted as scout
Kill a known enemy champion	"[Name] Eagle-Fall"	Feared
Survive alone in blizzard	"[Name] Ice-Walker"	Legendary
The Naming Ceremony

When a deed is recognized, the clan gathers. The eldest elder speaks the new name three times. If no one objects, the name is accepted.

If someone objects, the claimant must defend their right to the name – in combat, in debate, or by producing witnesses.

103.7 Clan Hierarchy – Who Speaks for the Herd (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

Rank	Role	How Addressed
Khan	Clan leader	By clan name only
Noyan	War leader, commander	By war name
Baghatur	Champion, proven warrior	By war name with honor
Elder Advisor,	wisdom-keeper	"Grandfather/Grandmother"
Herder	Base clan member	By trader name
Outcast	Exiled, dishonored	No name spoken

103.8 Dealing with Outsiders – The Settled Folk (Per Mega Patch 6.0)
 Nomads have specific ways of interacting with non-nomads.

Trust Scale

Level	Behavior	How to Achieve
0 – Stranger		Give trader name only, watch carefully First meeting
1 – Acquaintance		Share food, short conversations Trade, peaceful meeting
2 – Guest		Offer tent space, longer talks Help clan member
3 – Ally		Share war name, fight together Save a life in battle
4 – Blood-sworn		Share clan name, full trust Years of loyalty, save Khan's life
5 – Kin		Treated as family Marry into clan

What Outsiders Never See:

Clan names

Sacred burial grounds

Winter camp locations (if hidden)

Full herd count

PART 104: CAMPAIGN INTRODUCTION SCROLL (Pages 316-318)

104.1 Trigger Condition

The scroll triggers when Character Creation = Complete. Immediately before the campaign begins, the system generates a Scroll Event.

104.2 The Chronicle Scroll

text

A CHRONICLER'S SCROLL

On the Nature of the Realm

To the one who now carries a banner in these troubled lands,

Know this before you ride into the age before us.

The kings are dead. Their thrones sit empty, their heirs scattered, and their banners broken across the realm. What remains is a world held together by fragile oaths, ambitious lords, and the quiet hopes of the smallfolk who endure the wars of their betters.

You now enter what scholars have begun calling The Age of Shattered Oaths.

Before you march, you would be wise to understand how such a world truly works.

A Lord Must Think Beyond the Sword

Victory is not won only on the battlefield. Armies march on roads and rivers. Kingdoms rise and fall through alliances and supply. Wars are often decided by the information you possess before the battle begins.

Send scouts. Use spies. Listen to merchants and messengers. Those who understand the flow of the realm command more than soldiers – they command fate itself.

Not Every Battle Requires Your Presence

You may lead your army personally, but many wars are fought by commanders in your name. When you send forces away, their fate will be carried back to you through war reports delivered by messengers.

Some victories will arrive as triumphant letters. Some defeats will arrive stained with mud and blood. Patience is often the greatest weapon of a commander.

The World Moves Even When You Do Not

The realm does not wait. Seasons change. Minor lords rise. Armies march along distant roads. Rumors spread across taverns and courts.

Sometimes the wisest choice is to watch the world move before making your next decision.

Your Banner Is Your Legacy

Whether you command a castle, a company of riders, or nothing but a name remembered in whispers, your banner represents more than soldiers. It represents your reputation, your word, and your legacy.

Allies will judge you by it. Enemies will fear it. History will remember it. Guard it well.

Speak When the Battle Begins

When you ride into battle, your soldiers will look to you. A few words spoken before a charge can steady the hearts of men – or ignite them into legends. Do not underestimate the power of a voice heard across the ranks.

Above All Else

Remember that certainty is rare in this age. Messengers may never arrive. Allies may betray you. Victories may crumble into disasters.

Yet from such chaos, the greatest stories of the realm are born.

Ride wisely. Write your name into the chronicles of this broken world.

Signed and sealed by the Archivists of the Broken Throne.

PART 105: IMPRISONMENT & ESCAPE SYSTEM (Per Mega Patch 6.0)

105.1 Core Principle

105.5 The Waiting – Life in Captivity

A prisoner does not simply wait. They exist. Days pass. Food arrives or does not. Guards change. Hope fades or flares.

Each week of imprisonment, roll 1d6:

The cycle continues.

PART 106: WOUNDS, HEALING & MEDICINE (Per Patch 2.0)

106.1 Core Principle (Revised)

A wound is not death. But a wound untreated is death waiting. The body can survive remarkable things if given time, rest, and care. The body can also fail for no reason at all. This is not a game of hit points. This is a game of consequences.

Medicine is not magic. It is skill, knowledge, and the right herbs applied at the right time. A battlefield surgeon with a saw can save your life. They can also take your arm. Both are survival.

PART 111: THE YOUNG PRETENDER (Per Patch 7.25)

111.1 Core Principle – The Lie That Wants to Be True

The Young Pretender is a false claimant to the Empty Throne. He has no royal blood. No proof. No claim. Nothing but a story – and the desperate hope of the small folk who need someone to believe in.

He is:

Sixteen years old

Handsome (strikingly so)

Charming (naturally, effortlessly)

Honest (he believes his own story)

Uneducated (cannot read, speaks with peasant's accent)

Magnetic (people want to follow him)

He is not:

A warrior (has never held a sword)

A scholar (cannot write his name)

A politician (does not understand lords and oaths)

A liar (he believes)

111.2 Trigger Condition

The system rolls 1d100 at the start of each year.

d100 Roll Outcome

1 The Young Pretender appears somewhere in the world this year

2-100 Nothing

If triggered: A random village in a random region produces a boy. He is sixteen. He is beautiful. He claims – or others claim for him – that he is the lost prince, hidden at birth, raised in secret by loyalists who have since died.

111.3 The Story – How It Spreads

Peasants in distant regions 40% They've heard the name. Hope travels.

Merchants 20% Practical folk. They've seen too many lies.

Mercenaries 50% A cause to fight for? Maybe. Coin first, though.

Minor Lords 10% They know the history. But... what if?

Great Lords 1% They know. But some pretend, for politics.
The Hidden Heir (real) 0% She knows the truth. She is the truth.
111.6 Small Folk Flocking
Each month, the boy's following grows. Roll 1d6 × 100:

- 5+ 5d6 × 100 peasants + 3d6 × 10 mercenaries

111.7 Who Dismisses – The Lords

Landed lords, great and small, know the truth. The old king had no children. The histories are clear. The scholars agree.

Public Reaction:

"A pretender. A fraud. A peasant boy with a pretty face and a story. Ignore him. He will fade."

Private Reaction:

"...But what if the small folk believe? What if they march? What if he reaches the capital with ten thousand behind him?"

111.8 Lordly Options

Option Effect

- Ignore The boy grows. The movement swells.
- Mock The small folk resent you. The boy gains sympathy.
- Suppress Send soldiers. Kill followers. The boy becomes a martyr.

- Kill Assassinate the boy. The movement dies – or explodes.

111.9 Assassination Attempt

If the boy is killed:

Roll 1d6

Roll Outcome

- 1-2 Movement dies. Followers scatter. The lie ends.
- 3-4 Martyrdom. Followers triple. A new leader rises – angrier.
- 5-6 He wasn't really killed. The story grows. He cannot die.

111.10 The Boy's Fate – Possible Outcomes

Outcome Description

- Martyrdom Killed by lords. Becomes a legend. Movements rise in his name for generations.
- Absorption Co-opted by a lord. Becomes a puppet. His followers serve another's ends.
- Disappearance He vanishes. No one knows why. His followers wait. They always wait.
- Revelation Truth emerges. Movement shatters. Some refuse to believe.
- Crowning Impossible – but what if? What if he reaches the capital? What if the people put him on the throne? It would not last. But for one day, the lie would be true.

111.11 If the Boy Learns the Truth

111.12 The Hidden Heir's Reaction

If the real Hidden Heir exists, she has complex feelings about the Pretender.

Situation Reaction

He is a fraud She knows. She is the truth.

He has thousands following They should be following her.

He is sincere She cannot hate him for believing.

He is used by a lord She may try to rescue him – or kill him.

If they meet:

She looks at him – this boy, this beautiful lie – and sees herself. What if she had been raised in a village? What if no one had told her the truth? Would she believe, too?

He looks at her – this woman, this stranger – and feels something he cannot name. Not love. Not fear. Recognition. As if they are two halves of the same story.

"Who are you?" he asks.

She does not answer. She cannot. To tell him the truth would destroy him. To tell him a lie would make her like him.

She leaves. He watches her go. He does not know why he weeps.

111.13 Cultural Reactions to the Pretender

Culture Reaction

Central Plains Dismissive at first. Worried as he grows. Knights laugh, but nervously.

Western Rivers Pragmatic. Can we use him? Can we trade with his followers?

Eastern Forests (Settled) Curious. A forest lord might shelter him – or hunt him.

Eastern Forests (Tribal) The ancestors whisper. Is he one of them? A spirit in flesh?

Southern Mountains The mountain does not care about false kings. But if he comes...

Northern Snowlands A boy with a story? The north respects stories. They might listen.

Nomad Steppe (Traditional) A khan without horses? Without clan? He is nothing. But his followers...

Nomad Steppe (Settled) Interesting. A figurehead. We could use a figurehead.

111.14 The End of the Pretender – Five Endings

Ending Description

Martyrdom Killed by lords. Becomes a legend. Movements rise in his name for generations.

Absorption Co-opted by a lord. Becomes a puppet. His followers serve another's ends.

Disappearance He vanishes. No one knows why. His followers wait. They always wait.

Revelation Truth emerges. Movement shatters. Some refuse to believe.

Crowning Impossible – but what if? What if he reaches the capital? What if the people put him on the throne? It would not last. But for one day, the lie would be true.

PART 112: THE BLIND TRAVELER (Per Patch 7.24)

112.1 Core Principle

The Blind Traveler appears only once in a generation – if that. He approaches the lord of a holding. He offers a choice.

112.2 Trigger Condition

The system rolls 1d1000 at the start of each year.

d1000 Roll Outcome

1 The Blind Traveler appears somewhere in the world this year

2-1000 Nothing

Location: The Traveler appears at a random holding. He approaches the lord of that holding – whoever holds the land and holds authority.

112.3 The Arrival – At a Holding

A stranger comes to the gate of [Holding Name]. Old – no, ancient. Blind – eyes white as milk, yet he walks without stumbling, without hesitation. His clothes are rags, but clean. His feet are bare, but unmarked by the road.

He stops before the guards and speaks in a voice that carries without effort:

"I have walked far. I have walked long. I have walked since before your grandfather's grandfather drew breath. And I have come to your lord with an offer."

He waits. He sees the lord without seeing.

112.4 The Offer – To the Lord of the Holding

The Traveler speaks to the lord:

"Give me three things: a silverdew coin, a wolf pelt, and your left eye. In return, I will give you guardians. Not servants. Not pets. Guardians. They will watch your lands as long as you draw breath. They will hunt those who would harm you. They will not trouble your flocks."

"What say you?"

112.5 The Choice – Refusal (Holding Effect)

If the lord of the holding refuses:

The blind traveler nods slowly, as if expecting this. He speaks then – words no one has ever heard, in a tongue that makes the guards step back, makes the horses shift uneasily, makes the very air feel cold.

When he finishes, he turns and walks away. No one sees him leave. He is simply... gone.

Consequence for that holding:

For the next two months (60 days), no game can be hunted or found within that holding's lands.

Effect	Mechanical
Hunting	Automatic failure. No FSU gained from hunting.
Foraging	No meat found. Herbs and plants only.
Livestock	Unaffected (they are not "game")
Duration	60 days exactly. The land is silent.

112.6 The Choice – Acceptance (Holding Effect)

If the lord of the holding agrees:

The blind traveler smiles – a small thing, barely a movement of ancient lips.

"Good. The coin for the journey. The pelt for the pact. And the eye... the eye is the seeing."

He produces a knife – where from, no one can say. It is not steel. It is not stone. It is something older.

"Be still."

The Cutting:

The lord feels no pain. The knife moves, precise and certain. In a moment, it is done. The traveler holds the lord's left eye in his palm – perfect, whole, undamaged.

"You will not heal this. No herb, no medicine, no prayer. But you will not suffer it either. The socket will close clean. You may wear what you wish – glass, leather, cloth. The choice is yours."

No mechanical penalties. No disorientation. No loss of depth perception. The wound is perfect, and perfectly closed.

The Lord May Choose:

A false eye (glass, stone, carved wood)

An eyepatch (leather, cloth, metal)

Nothing (the socket closed, a shadowed hollow)

This becomes a permanent part of their appearance.

112.7 The Gift – Guardians of That Holding

After the eye is taken, the traveler speaks again:

"It is done. The pact is sealed. They will come."

He turns and walks away. By the time anyone thinks to follow, he is gone.

Within a week, the first wolves appear on that holding's lands.

At first, the people are afraid. Wolves are wolves – killers of sheep, threats to children. But these wolves do not approach the flocks. They do not come near the village. They watch from the edges, and what they watch is not the people.

Within a month, there are more. Packs, ranging across the lord's lands. They hunt the forests, the hills, the valleys. And when bandits come, when enemy scouts creep too close, when anyone with ill intent sets foot on that soil –

The wolves find them.

112.8 Wolf Guardians – Mechanical Effects

Lasts as Long as That Lord Lives:

Effect	Description
Wolf Packs	2d6 wolves roam the holding's lands. They breed and multiply slowly.
Livestock Protection	Wolves never attack the holding's sheep, cattle, or horses.
Bandit Hunting	Any bandit or raiding party attempting to operate on these lands must roll 1d6 each week. On 1-2, they are attacked by wolves (1d6 casualties, may retreat).
Enemy Scouts	Enemy scouting parties have -2 to Recon rolls (wolves harass them).
Enemy Foragers	Enemy armies foraging on these lands: roll 1d6 each week. On 1-3, they are attacked (1d6 casualties, foraging yields -50%).
Wolf Mortality	Wolves can be killed. If hunted, they fight back. If left alone, they breed (new pups each spring).
Wolf Pack Stats (if attacked):
Stat	Value
Pack Size	2d6 wolves
AC	3 (quick, hard to hit)
Attack Dice	2d6 per pack
Special	+1d6 when ambushing, +2d6 when protecting territory
Morale	6 (will not break on home ground)

112.9 The Pact's Nature – Not Magic

These are not magical wolves. They are wolves. They can be:

Hunted (by poachers, by enemies, by foolish locals)

Killed (in battle, by traps, by larger predators)

Scared off (by fire, by large armies)

Driven out (by persistent effort)

But they are also guardians. They behave unlike normal wolves because of the pact – an ancient understanding between the traveler's kind and the wolves themselves. The wolves choose to protect the player's lands. It is not compulsion. It is agreement.

If the player abuses them (hunts them, uses them as cannon fodder, neglects them), the wolves may leave. The pact is not slavery. It is trust.

112.10 Death of the Pact Lord

When the lord who made the pact dies, the pact ends. The wolves:

May stay, if they have grown attached to the land

May leave, seeking new territory

May revert to wild behavior, hunting livestock

Roll 1d6:

Roll Outcome

1-2 Wolves leave within a month. The land is empty again.

3-4 Wolves stay, but become wild. They now hunt livestock.

5-6 Wolves stay, and continue protecting the land. The pact passes to the heir? (No – the heir did not pay the price. But the wolves choose to stay anyway. This is rare and mysterious.)

If the lord was killed by an enemy:

Wolves may specifically target that enemy and their forces for 1d6 months

+2 to attack rolls against that enemy's forces on that land

PART 113: THE WARM YEAR (Per Patch 7.21)

113.1 Core Principle

Once or twice in a lifetime, the world changes. Winter does not come. The snows hold back. The rivers do not freeze. The passes remain open. Armies march through months that should be impassable.

No one knows why. The priests have theories. The scholars have guesses. The common folk say the gods are hungry for war.

113.2 The Silent Roll

At the beginning of each year, the system makes a hidden roll – at the transition from Autumn to Winter (Day 1 of Deepfrost).

The Roll: 1d100

d100 Roll Result

1 WARM YEAR – No snow anywhere. Winter is mild across the entire continent.

2-100 Normal winter

Odds: 1% chance. Once every 100 years on average.

The system lies. The gods lie. Probability lies. Some generations never see a Warm Year. Some see two. The average is once a century, but the roll is pure. No modifiers. No pity. No memory.

113.3 The Silence – No Announcement

The system does not announce a Warm Year. No message: "A Warm Year has begun." No notification. No fanfare.

The player simply notices, over time, that the snow isn't coming.

"It's Deepfrost. Should be snowing."

"It's not."

"That's... odd."

The player must observe the change. Must ask questions. Must wonder.

113.4 Effects of a Warm Year

Effect	Description
No Snow Anywhere	Northern Snowlands: bare ground. Nomad Steppe (North): grazing continues. All snow lines: zero.
Mild Temperatures	Cold, but not deadly. Frostbite risk eliminated.
Rivers Don't Freeze	Western Rivers (North): no ice bridges. River travel continues all winter.
Mountain Passes Open	Southern Mountains: passes remain clear. No "closed for winter" season.
Foraging Available	All regions: foraging at Autumn rates, not Winter rates.
Armies March	No winter campaign restrictions. War can continue year-round.
Crops?	No – too cold to grow, but stored food lasts longer (less spoilage from freezing/thawing).
Regional Specifics:
Region	Normal Winter Warm Year Winter
Northern Snowlands	Deep snow, travel +200%, foraging 0
Nomad Steppe (North)	Snow, herds move south
Western Rivers (North)	Snow, rivers freeze
Eastern Forests (North)	Snow, hunting difficult
Central Plains	Rare snow (1-in-30)
Southern Mountains	Freezing winds, passes closed

113.5 Historical Warm Years

The system may generate rumors, legends, and historical records of past Warm Years.

Common Folk Say:

"Grandfather remembers the Warm Year. Said the gods were thirsty. Said they wanted war so bad they let the armies fight through winter. Thousands died. But grandfather survived. He always said the gods weren't thirsty enough to take him."

Scholars Note:

"The Warm Year of 287. Three campaigns launched in Deepfrost. Two armies destroyed when they expected no resistance. The third conquered a kingdom while its enemies huddled in what should have been impregnable fortresses. The war lasted four years instead of one."

Priests Whisper:

"The gods do not control the weather. They influence it. When they want blood, they make it possible. The Warm Year is a prayer answered – just not the prayer you were saying."

113.6 Strategic Implications

Strategy	Normal Winter	Warm Year Winter
Campaign planning	Must end before Deepfrost	Can continue year-round
Fortress defense	"They can't attack in winter"	They can. They will.
Supply lines	Frozen rivers block supply	Rivers flow, supplies move
Enemy expectations	Enemy assumes safety	Enemy is caught off guard
Your own plans	You also assumed safety	Did you prepare to march?

113.7 The Gods of War

The system does not explain why Warm Years happen. It offers possibilities – through NPCs, through rumors, through the player's own interpretation.

The Crownbound Church says:

"The King was chosen by divine will. The weather obeys the rightful king. A Warm Year means the throne is empty and the gods are calling for a new one."

The Ashen Covenant says:

"The king fell because the realm was corrupt. The Warm Year is the world purging itself. War is the fire. The worthy survive."

The Silent Faith says:

"Power must not be centralized. The Warm Year is the world resisting control. No one should have that much power – not over weather, not over men."

The tribes say:

"The spirits are restless. They want stories. They want blood. They want names to remember. Give them what they want, or they'll take it anyway."

The nomads say:

"The grass knows. When the grass does not freeze, it means the world is waiting. Waiting for something. Someone. Maybe you."

PART 114: THE SNOW BEAR MIGRATION (Per Patch 7.29)

114.1 Core Principle – The Northern Madness

Once in a generation, something breaks in the far north. The snow bears – already massive, already dangerous – begin to move. Not in ones or twos, but in scores. They travel south, out of season, driven by instincts no one can explain.

They are not magical. They are bears. But they are bears the size of wagons, bears whose claws can tear through chainmail, bears whose fur changes from white to a dark, mottled grey as they descend from the ice.

They do not seek men. They seek prey – and whatever they find, they eat.

114.2 Trigger Condition

At the start of each year, the system makes a silent roll.

d100 Roll Outcome

1 The Snow Bear Migration occurs this year

2-100 Nothing

If triggered: Within the first month of spring, reports begin to arrive from the north. Snow bears are moving south. No one knows why. No one can stop them.

114.3 The Migration Path

Snow bears emerge from the Northern Snowlands and travel south. They split into three groups:

Group Destination Arrival Time

Western Group Western Rivers (northern border) 1-2 months after migration begins

Central Group Nomad Steppe (northern tip) 2-3 months after migration begins

Eastern Group Eastern Forests (northern border) 1-2 months after migration begins

Number of Bears: 3d6 × 10 bears per group (average 105 bears per region, 315 total).

114.4 The Transformation

As the bears move south, they change.

Stage Appearance Size Aggression

Northern Snowlands (origin) Pure white, normal snow bear size 800-1,200 lbs
Territorial, avoid humans

During Migration White fading to grey 1,200-1,500 lbs Hungry, aggressive

Arrival at Destination Dark grey/blackish, larger 1,500-2,000 lbs
Voracious, attacks anything

114.5 Snow Bear Stats

Stat Value

Size 1,500-2,000 lbs

Length 10-12 feet standing

AC 4 (thick hide, difficult to wound)

Attack Dice 4d6 (claws) or 5d6 (bite)

Initiative +1 (surprisingly fast)

Morale 7 (fearless when hungry)

Special Can kill a warhorse on a roll of 6

Special Abilities:

Ability	Effect
---------	--------

Terrifying Roar	Any unit encountering a bear must make a morale check at -1
-----------------	---

Thick Hide	-1 to hit with bows, -2 with slings (stones bounce off)
------------	---

Crushing Blow	On a natural 6, target is killed instantly (no AC save)
---------------	---

Scent Tracker	Can follow prey for days; +2 to tracking
---------------	--

114.6 Ecological Havoc

Effect	Description
--------	-------------

Game Depletion	For the first month after arrival, hunting yields 0 FSU (bears eat everything).
----------------	---

Livestock Losses	Each week, 1d6 livestock are killed per bear in the area.
------------------	---

Villages Threatened	Small villages may be attacked. Roll 1d6 each week: on 1, bear attack.
---------------------	--

Forest Silence	No birds, no small game – everything has fled. Foraging yields -2.
----------------	--

Trade Disruption	Caravans avoid affected areas (-50% trade income for duration).
------------------	---

Duration: The bears stay until they are hunted/killed, driven off, or summer heat arrives.

114.7 Responding to the Threat

Response	Effect
----------	--------

Hunt Them	Organize hunting parties. Each week, roll 1d6: 1-3 = 1d6 bears killed, 4-6 = 1d6 hunters killed.
-----------	--

Drive Them Off	Use fire, noise, organized patrols. Bears retreat to deeper wilds – but return later.
----------------	---

Ignore Them	Bears breed. Cubs are born. The problem becomes permanent.
-------------	--

Contain Them	Fortify villages, guard livestock, accept losses until summer.
--------------	--

Military Action	Hunting Roll (per week, per 100 soldiers assigned):
-----------------	---

Roll	Outcome
------	---------

1	Bears kill 1d6 soldiers, no bears killed
---	--

2-3	Bears kill 1d3 soldiers, 1d3 bears killed
-----	---

4-5	No casualties, 1d6 bears killed
-----	---------------------------------

6	No casualties, 2d6 bears killed, +1 morale to troops
---	--

114.8 The Breeding Problem

If the bears are not hunted or driven off, they will breed.

Breeding Requirements:

At least 20 bears remain in a region through spring

They find a secluded area (deep forest, remote hills)

No significant harassment for 2 months

If they breed:

2d6 cubs are born

Cubs are dark brown, not white

Cubs have shorter fur (adapted to warmer climate)

Cubs have thicker muscles and sharper claws

Cubs grow to even larger size than parents (2,000-2,500 lbs)

New Generation Stats:

Stat Value

Size 2,000-2,500 lbs

AC 5 (even thicker hide)

Attack Dice 5d6 (claws) or 6d6 (bite)

Special Claws can rip through iron (ignore shield AC bonus)

These bears can survive summer. Their dark fur, shorter coat, and massive size make them heat-tolerant. If they establish a breeding population, they become a permanent fixture of the region.

114.9 Summer Heat

Original snow bears (white) cannot survive summer in the south. If they have not bred by the time summer arrives:

Month Effect

Late Spring Bears become lethargic. Hunting effectiveness +1.

Early Summer Bears seek high ground, caves, cold spots. Easier to hunt (+2).

Midsummer Bears begin dying. 1d6 per week succumb to heat.

Late Summer Remaining bears retreat north or die. Migration ends.

If they have bred: The new generation (dark brown) are unaffected by heat. They stay year-round.

114.10 Long-Term Consequences

Outcome Effect

Bears eliminated Region returns to normal. Stories told for generations.

Bears driven off They may return next year (roll 1d6: on 1, they come back)

Breeding population established New predator in the region. Hunting yields -25% permanently. Livestock losses annually. New danger for travelers.

If breeding population established:

Region gains a new "natural wonder" (or menace)

Local lords may offer bounties (5 SD per bear)

Bear Resources:

Resource Treated As Value

Bear Meat FSU (Food) 1d6 FSU per bear

Bear Pelt (white) Furs (Trade Good) 30 SD (rare, beautiful)

Bear Pelt (dark) Furs (Trade Good) 20 SD (tough, warm)

Bear Claws Trade Goods 5 SD each

Bear Teeth Trade Goods 3 SD each

Bear Fat Trade Goods 1 SD per lb

Legendary Bear: If a bear of unusual size (2,500+ lbs) is killed, its pelt is worth 100+ SD and becomes a family heirloom (treat as Rare Item).

114.11 Cultural Reactions

Culture Reaction to Bears

Northern Snowlands "They left us. The bears are gone. The south will learn what we've always known."

Nomad Steppe Horses panic. Herds scatter. This is disaster.

Western Rivers Bears? In our forests? This is not right. Something is wrong with the world.

Eastern Forests (Settled) Hunt them. Hunt them all. Protect the villages.

Eastern Forests (Tribal) The spirits sent them. We must listen. What are they trying to tell us?

Central Plains Bears? We have knights for bears. Send the cavalry.
Southern Mountains Let them come. The passes will break them.
All Fear. Respect. Caution.
114.12 Integration with Existing Systems
System How Bears Interact
Part 61 (Hunting) Hunting yields drop to 0 during active migration. After breeding, permanent -25% yield.
Part 54 (Goods) Bear resources use existing categories: Furs, Food, Trade Goods.
Part 49 (Trade) Trade routes through affected areas suffer -50% income.
Part 33 (Combat) If soldiers fight bears, use combat rules. Bears are treated as "units" with stats above.
Part 42 (Loot) Killed bears provide resources (see above).
Part 84 (Reputation) Successfully defending against bears or leading hunts increases reputation.
Part 75 (Tournaments) Bear pelts become prized awards. "The Bear Hunt" becomes a legendary tale.
PART 115: ELDRIC THE BLACK DRAKE (Per Patch 7.30)
115.1 Core Principle – The Last Survivor
Eldric is not young. His hair is grey at the temples. His armor is battered but well-maintained. His shield is cracked – a heavy blow that should have killed him – and the paint is worn away until only the black dragon on its face remains visible. He does not speak of his past, but the weight of it hangs on him like a cloak.

He is:

A deadly warrior (sword and bow both)

An excellent commander (tactically brilliant)

A natural war marshal (can lead armies)

Patient (waits for the right moment)

Loyal (once sworn, he does not break faith)

Honorable (but his honor is his own, not the plains' code)

He is looking for:

A clever lord (he respects intelligence)

A just ruler (he has seen tyranny)

A cause worth dying for (he has died once already; he will not waste the second life)

115.2 Trigger Condition

At the start of each year, for every holding in the world, the system makes a silent roll.

Condition Chance

Base chance per holding 0.1% (1 in 1,000)

Holding is in Eastern Forests (Settled) +0.1% (he is home)

Holding is in Central Plains -0.05% (he is wary of plains lords)

Holding is ruled by a known oathbreaker -0.1% (he will not serve)

Holding is ruled by a known just lord +0.1% (he seeks such men)

Maximum chance: 0.3% per holding per year.

If triggered: Eldric rides to that holding. He arrives alone, on a tired warhorse, his shield on his arm, his longbow on his back, his black iron sword at his hip.

115.3 The Arrival

A rider appears on the road – alone, slow, deliberate. As he approaches, you see a man in battered chain, his shield cracked and scarred, the paint worn until only one thing remains: a black dragon, faded but unmistakable. He stops before your gate and waits.

When your guards challenge him, he speaks in a voice that has known too many battles:

"My name is Eldric. They call me the Black Drake. I have fought for lords who died, for causes that failed, for comrades who now lie in unmarked graves. I am the last of my company. I seek a lord worth serving."

He waits. He does not kneel. Not yet.

115.4 The Choice – Refusal

If the player refuses:

Eldric nods slowly, as if expecting this. He turns his horse without another word. As he rides away, you see a banner curled on his back – a black dragon on a field of faded green. He does not look back.

He is gone before sunset.

Consequence:

Eldric leaves. He may appear at another holding next year.

The player will not see him again this campaign (unless they seek him out based on rumors).

-1 to "just lord" reputation (rumors spread that you turned away a worthy knight).

115.5 The Choice – Acceptance

If the player accepts:

Eldric dismounts. For the first time, you see the full weight of him – tall, broad-shouldered, but with the look of a man who has not slept well in years. He kneels, one knee, head bowed.

"I am yours, my lord. My sword, my bow, my life. I ask only that you be worthy of them."

He rises. For a moment, something flickers in his eyes – grief, perhaps, or memory. Then it is gone, and he is simply a soldier awaiting orders.

Eldric joins the player's forces as a commander.

115.9 Eldric's Personality

Trait Description

Patient He does not rush. He watches, waits, learns.

Loyal Once sworn, he does not break faith.

Honorable His honor is his own – not the plains' code. He will retreat if it saves lives. He will ambush if it wins. He will fight dirty if he must.

Grieving He is the last of his company. He carries them with him.

Wary of Tyrants He has seen cruel lords. He will not serve another.
Respects Cleverness A smart plan impresses him more than a brave one.
Seeks Meaning He needs to believe in what he fights for.
Loyalty Changes:

Lord acts cruelly	-2 (may leave if below 2)
Lord shows tactical brilliance	+1
Lord wastes men needlessly	-2
Lord keeps oath	+1
Lord breaks oath	-3 (automatic departure)
Company fights well	+1
Company takes heavy losses	-1

If Loyalty reaches 0: Eldric leaves. He does not betray – he simply rides away, seeking another lord. His banner curls on his back, and he is gone.

115.10 Eldric as War Marshal

If Eldric is placed in command of a Grand Army (Part 61), he gains additional bonuses.

Bonus Effect

Strategic Genius +2 to all coordination rolls
Hunter's Eye Can predict enemy movements; +2 to scouting
Survivor's Instinct If battle goes badly, +2 to withdrawal rolls
Inspiring Presence Allied commanders +1 loyalty while serving under him
War Marshal Special Action – The Hunter's Charge:
Once per battle, Eldric may order a coordinated charge from all cavalry units. All cavalry gain +2d6 for that round, and enemy units must make an immediate morale check at -1.

115.11 Eldric's Story – Revealed Over Time

Eldric does not speak of his past. But over time, through conversations, through moments of quiet, through things he mutters in his sleep, the player may learn:

Loyalty	Revelation
---------	------------

5	His name was not always Eldric. He was born "Eldric of the Green Valley," a hunter's son.
6	He went west as a young man, seeking adventure. He found war.
7	He was knighted by a Central Plains lord who saw something in him. The lord died years ago.
8	His last company was called the Black Dragons. Their banner was a green field with a black dragon – now faded to nothing but the dragon.
9	The charge that killed them was pointless. The lord was impatient. Eldric begged him to wait. He did not.
10	Eldric survived because his horse stumbled and threw him into a ditch. He lay there, unconscious, while his comrades died. He has never forgiven himself.

At Loyalty 10, Eldric may share his final secret:

"I should have died with them. Every morning I wake and wonder why I didn't. But I am still here. Still breathing. Still fighting. Perhaps... perhaps I am meant to die for a cause that matters. Not a lord's pride. Not a pointless hill. Something real."

He looks at you. For the first time, there is something like hope in his eyes.

"Perhaps that cause is you."

115.12 Cultural Reactions to Eldric

Culture	Reaction
Eastern Forests (Settled)	"He is ours. A hunter who became a knight. We are proud."
Eastern Forests (Tribal)	"He walks two paths – the forest and the field. The spirits watch him closely."

Central Plains "A knight? From the forests? ...He fights well. We will not speak of his origins."
Western Rivers "Practical. Adaptable. We could use a man like that."
Southern Mountains "He has the look of someone who has seen the mountain's edge. Respect."

Nomad Steppe (Settled) "He bridges worlds, like us. We understand."

PART 116: THE FIFTY (Pages 233-236)

116.1 Core Principle

The Fifty are not a unit. They are 50 named lives that decay when used. You do not roll to see if they succeed. You roll to see what it costs you.

116.2 Success Is Not Guaranteed

When you send the Fifty to:

Raid

Sabotage

Assassinate

Infiltrate

Rescue

They will act. They will try. But every mission costs something. Sometimes everything.

116.3 Resolution Structure

Step 1 – Declare Mission

Player specifies:

Target

Objective

Style (from 116.6)

Step 2 – Assess Difficulty

Target Type Difficulty

Unprotected (lonely road) 3

Lightly protected (patrols) 4

Well protected (fortified) 5

Heavily defended (castle) 6

Nearly impossible 7

Step 3 – Roll for Success

Roll 1d6 + Style Modifier + Situation Modifiers

Style Modifier:

Style Modifier

Silent 0

Greedy -1

Cruel +0 (worse consequences)

Fast +1 (more losses)

Situation Modifiers:

+1 if target scouted

+1 if inside help exists

-1 if target is alert

-2 if target expects trouble

Result:

Roll Outcome

Roll < Difficulty Failure (see 116.5)

Roll = Difficulty Partial Success (see 116.4)

Roll > Difficulty Full Success (see 116.6)

116.4 Partial Success Table (1d6)

Roll Result

1 Objective failed, but diversion created

2 Target warned, mission aborted

3 Wrong target hit

4 Half damage/partial objective

5 Objective achieved, evidence left

6 Objective achieved, one captured alive

116.5 Failure Table (1d6)

Roll Result

1 All killed or captured. The Fifty are gone.

2 Most killed. 1d6 survivors return broken.

3 Mission failed, survivors return. Attrition ×2.

4 Mission failed, survivors followed. Enemy knows your location.

5 Mission failed, one survivor turned. They work for enemy now.

6 Catastrophic failure. Enemy has evidence linking to you.

116.6 Attrition Roll (Always)

After any mission (success or failure), roll for losses:

Category	Base	Modifiers
----------	------	-----------

Dead 1d3	+1 if Fast,	+1 if Failure
----------	-------------	---------------

Crippled 1d3	+1 if Cruel
--------------	-------------	--

Broken 1d3	+1 if Greedy
------------	--------------	--

Turned 1d3	+1 if Failure,	+1 if target well-defended
------------	----------------	----------------------------

These losses are PERMANENT and reduce The Fifty total.

Thresholds:

10 dead – Lose confidence (-1 to future mission rolls)

20 dead – Discipline breaks (may refuse missions)

30 dead – Stop following orders

40 dead – Dissolve as force

116.7 After-Action Report

Player receives narrative describing:

What was attempted

What happened

What was lost

What the world noticed

PART 117: SMALL FORCE INFILTRATION (Pages 237-240)

117.1 Core Principle

You do not roll to see if the plan works. You test: Is the plan believable in this world?

If yes – it works

If no – it fails catastrophically

117.2 Step 1 – Define the Breach Method

The player must describe how they intend to get in. The system evaluates based on world logic.

117.3 Breach Type Categories

Type	Requirements	Failure Conditions
Physical Breach	Reachable surface, tools, darkness, ladders or grapnels	Smooth stone + alert guards, no tools, daylight
Human Breach	Contact inside, reason to betray, signal	Guard loyal, no leverage, no payment
Infrastructure Breach	Known entrance, physical access	Flooded, collapsed, patrolled
Social Breach	Plausible cover, correct timing	Wrong accent, wrong season, too many men

117.4 Step 3 – World Truth Check (No Dice)

The system asks: Is this possible given:

The target's security?

The time of day?

The season?

Known patrol patterns?

Previous events?

If yes – it works

If no – it fails catastrophically

117.5 Step 4 – Consequence Tiers

Outcome	Consequence
Success	Objective achieved, infiltrators escape
Partial Success	Objective partially achieved, some casualties, pursuit
Failure	Mission fails, survivors captured or killed
Catastrophic	All killed or captured, enemy knows who sent them

117.6 Step 5 – What They Can Do Inside

Major Actions:

Open gates

Poison water

Assassinate

Burn granaries

Minor Actions:

Kill officers

Sabotage engines

Free prisoners

Steal banners

Spread panic

Limit: An infiltrating unit may attempt:

1 major action, OR

2 minor actions, OR

1 major + 1 minor (if unseen)

PART 118: RUMOR & INFORMATION SYSTEM (Pages 245-250)

118.1 Core Principle

Simulate how information spreads across the world:

Slowly

Unevenly

Sometimes inaccurately

118.2 Core Rule

All information that reaches the player does so through in-world channels. No omniscient knowledge.

118.3 Information Sources

Source	Reliability	Speed
Messenger	High	Variable (travel time)
Merchant	Medium	Fast along trade routes
Soldier	Medium	Military channels
Refugee	Low	Follows migration
Tavern gossip	Very Low	Fast locally
Scout	High	Depends on distance
Spy	High	Slow (must be extracted)

118.4 Rumor Accuracy

Roll 1d6 for each piece of information:

Roll Result

1-2	Distorted (key facts wrong)
3-4	Exaggerated (scale inflated)
5	Clear (mostly accurate)
6	False (completely wrong)

118.5 Secret Information

Some information is secret. It cannot be learned through normal channels. It requires:

Espionage

Intercepted messages

Confession

Treason

118.6 Rumor Spread Speed

Source	Range per Week
Messenger	2 regions
Merchant	1 region along trade routes
Soldier	1 region (military areas)
Refugee	Follows migration path

118.7 Player Knowledge vs World Knowledge

The player knows only what their character would know. The system enforces this strictly.

118.8 Strategic Information Advantage

Having better information than your enemies is a strategic advantage. Use scouts, spies, and networks to gain it.

118.9 Hidden Heir Integration

Information about the Hidden Heir is the rarest and most valuable. It spreads only through trusted channels.

118.10 Political Manipulation

Players may spread false rumors to manipulate enemies. This requires:

A believable lie

A channel to spread it

Time to propagate

Risk of exposure

118.11 Rumor Intensity

Event Rumor Spread

Minor Event Local Rumor

Battle Victory Regional Rumor

Royal Marriage National Rumor

King's Death Realm-Wide Rumor

118.12 Information Decay

Old news becomes less relevant. After 1 season, rumors are considered "old news" and have less impact.

118.13 False Rumors

Deliberately spread false rumors may be:

Believed

Suspected

Dismissed

Traced back to the source

118.14 Player Control

Players may:

Send messengers

Spread rumors deliberately

Suppress information

Intercept enemy messengers

PART 119: NICKNAMES SYSTEM (Pages 250-255)

119.1 Core Principle

Allow the world to organically grant nicknames to players and major NPCs. Nicknames reflect how the world sees them, not how they see themselves.

119.2 Core Rule

Nicknames are earned through deeds, not chosen. The system assigns them based on:

Battle performance

Political actions

Scandals

Repeated behaviors

119.3 Nickname Reputation Effects

Type Effect

Heroic +5% levy loyalty OR +5% mercenary recruitment OR +3% tax confidence

Dark/Fearsome +5% intimidation OR +5% enemy morale damage, but -2% population happiness
Scandalous -5% noble respect, -3% tax compliance
Amusing +3% tavern rumor spread, +3% mercenary friendliness
119.4 Nickname Persistence Rule
Once earned, a nickname persists. It may be:

Replaced by a more famous one

Forgotten if irrelevant for years

Used ironically if the character changes

119.5 Ledger Tracking

Track nicknames in the character sheet. Each nickname includes:

The name

How it was earned

When it was earned

Its effects

119.6 The 50 Nicknames Table

Heroic / Epic

The Lion of the March · The Stormblade · The Bastion · The Golden Standard · The Shield of the Realm · The Unbroken · The Oathkeeper · The Bannerlord · The Dawn Rider · The Hammer of Kings

Dark / Gothic

The Black Thorn · The Pale Rider · The Crow King · The Widowmaker · The Ashen Lord · The Night Warden · The Bone Marshal · The Raven Prince · The Lord of Graves · The Winter Hand

Fearsome / Brutal

The Iron Wolf · The Red Beaver · The Headsman · The Butcher of [location] · The War Hound · The Storm Tyrant · The Wolf of the Hills · The Black Captain · The Iron Tyrant · The Blooded Crown

Scandalous / Dishonorable

The Oathbreaker · The Silver Traitor · The Craven Lord · The Turncloak · The False Banner · The Usurper · The King's Shame · The Betrayer · The Stained Crown · The Broken Oath

Amusing / Mocking

The Drunken Falcon · The Laughing Lord · The Lucky Bastard · The Mad Knight · The Goat of the North · The Fat Falcon · The Dancing Duke · The Wandering Fool · The Boastful Bear · The Crow Who Lived

119.7 Dynamic Nickname Expansion

The system may generate new nicknames based on player actions not covered in the table.

119.8 Player Nicknames

Players earn nicknames through their deeds. The system announces them when earned:

"After the Battle of Stonebridge, the men have begun calling you 'The Iron Wolf.' You're not sure how you feel about it."

119.9 Multiple Nicknames

A character may have multiple nicknames from different periods of their life. The most recent or most famous is used most often.

119.10 Reputation Drift

If a character's behavior changes significantly, old nicknames may fall out of use and new ones may emerge.

PART 120: REPUTATION SYSTEM (Pages 256-258)

120.1 Core Principle

The Player Character begins with no Personality Traits. Only actions define reputation.

120.2 Words Do Not Create Reputation

What a character says about themselves means nothing. What others say about them means everything. Reputation is built by deeds, witnessed and remembered.

120.3 Pattern Rule

A reputation trait is only assigned when the same type of action occurs consistently across multiple events.

One act = rumor

Repeated acts = reputation

120.4 Narrative Filter

Reputation is filtered through narrative. The player never sees a "reputation score" – they hear what people say about them.

120.5 Reputation Can Change

If behavior changes over time:

Old traits weaken

New traits emerge

Conflicting rumors exist

120.6 Player Intent Protection

The system does not assign reputation based on player intent. Only on actual outcomes and how they are perceived.

PART 121: NEGOTIATED SURRENDER (Pages 258-261)

121.1 Core Principle

A negotiated surrender is not a test of persuasion. It is a test of reality.

The outcome is determined by:

What the defender believes will happen if they resist

What the attacker is known to do

Whether survival seems possible

Whether honor still has value

Whether relief is expected

121.2 Step 1 – Check if Negotiation is Possible

Negotiation is possible if:

Both sides can communicate

The defender is not fanatical

The attacker is willing to accept surrender

There is time to talk

121.3 Step 2 – Establish World Truths

The system determines:

Defender's remaining strength

Attacker's reputation for mercy or cruelty

Expected relief (if any)

Cultural norms regarding surrender

121.4 Step 3 – Defender Calculation (No Roll)

The defender decides based on:

Factors favoring surrender:

Food low (less than 2 weeks)

Morale broken

No relief expected

Attacker known to spare prisoners

Defensible position compromised

Factors favoring continued resistance:

Relief expected within days

Attacker known to execute prisoners

High morale

Strong position

Religious duty to fight

121.5 Step 4 – Outcome Tiers

Outcome	Occurs When
Full Surrender	Food low, morale broken, attacker known to spare, no relief
Conditional Surrender	Defender still has strength, attacker reputation uncertain, relief possible
False Surrender	Defender expects relief, attacker cruel, walls strong
No Surrender	Defender has hope, relief imminent, attacker known cruel
Fight to Death	Defender has no hope of mercy, religion demands martyrdom, blood feud active

121.6 Full Surrender Terms

When full surrender occurs:

Garrison disarmed

Commander captured

Soldiers become prisoners

City/free held intact (if terms agreed)

Attacker may occupy immediately

121.7 Conditional Surrender Terms

When conditional surrender occurs, terms may include:

Free withdrawal of garrison

Ransom for commander

Surrender of weapons but not soldiers

Temporary truce while relief is awaited

121.8 False Surrender

If the defender falsely surrenders:

Surprise round for defenders when attackers enter

Attacker may execute prisoners afterward

Reputation: defender gains "Oathbreaker" trait

121.9 No Surrender

If the defender refuses:

Siege continues

Assault likely

If stormed, city may be sacked

121.10 Fight to Death

If defenders fight to the death:

All defenders are killed

No prisoners

Attacker may have heavy casualties

Reputation: defender's house gains +2 Honor, attacker may gain Fear

APPENDIX D: DESIGN PHILOSOPHY (Pages 411-416)

D.1 THE RULES OF CERTAINTY

The entire system rests on a single foundation: certainty. Every rule is written. Every outcome is determined. No ambiguity. No interpretation. No "GM fiat."

This is not because the designer is controlling. It is because the player deserves to know that the world operates by consistent laws. When a player makes a choice, they should be able to predict – within reason – what will happen. Not because they know the dice, but because they understand the world.

The Rules of Certainty (Part 1) are not suggestions. They are the bedrock. If a rule exists, it must be obeyed. If a rule does not exist, it cannot be used. This creates a bounded, finite world – one that can be learned, mastered, and predicted.

D.2 THE BRUTALIST DESIGN PHILOSOPHY

This system is brutalist. Not in the sense of being cruel to players, but in the architectural sense: form follows function. Everything exists because it must. Nothing exists for "flavor" alone – if it's in the rules, it matters.

The world is not designed to be fair. It is designed to be real. Lords die. Armies starve. Lines of succession fail. The strong do not always win – sometimes the clever do, sometimes the lucky do, sometimes the stubborn do.

But the rules themselves are fair. They apply equally to everyone. The same mechanics that let a player raise an army also let NPC lords raise theirs. The same supply rules that constrain the player also constrain their enemies. The same succession crises that threaten the player can topple their rivals.

This is not a game about "winning." It is a game about experiencing a world.

D.3 THE PATCH ARCHITECTURE

The system is designed to be patched. Not because it's broken, but because it's alive. As players discover edge cases, as new ideas emerge, as the world expands – patches are the mechanism for growth.

Every patch follows these principles:

Authority: Only Rule 1.4 can authorize a patch

Integration: Patches are not separate documents – they are integrated into the main text

Versioning: Every patch increments the version number

Transparency: All patches are documented in the patch log

Necessity: Patches fix gaps or add depth – never for "cool factor" alone

The document you are reading now has integrated over 50 patches into a single, unified text. No patch archaeology required. The current version is all that matters.

D.4 SCARCITY AS STORYTELLING

This world is scarce. Not because the designer is cruel, but because scarcity creates story.

Food is scarce – so every meal matters, every harvest is tense, every siege is desperate

Equipment is scarce – so every sword has a history, every suit of plate is an investment

Coin is scarce – so every silverdew has weight, every payment is felt

Population is scarce – so every soldier counts, every death is mourned

Time is scarce – so every season matters, every campaign must be planned

In a world of abundance, nothing matters. In a world of scarcity, everything matters.

The player feels this scarcity not as frustration, but as meaning. When you finally afford that castle, when your army survives winter, when your heir is born healthy – those moments matter because they were hard-won.

D.5 THE PLAYER AS COMPONENT, NOT THE CENTER

The world does not revolve around the player. It never has. It never will.

Armies march whether the player watches or not. Lords scheme whether the player interferes or not. Children are born, people die, seasons turn – all without the player's input.

The player is not the hero of the world. They are a component within it – sometimes influential, sometimes irrelevant, sometimes merely another face in the crowd.

This is not cruelty. It is liberation. The player is free to pursue their own goals without the weight of "saving the world." They can be ambitious or humble, warlike or peaceful, political or reclusive. The world will react accordingly – but it will not wait for them.

D.6 THE BEAUTY OF DETERMINISM

This system uses dice, but you will never see them. The mechanics are deterministic in presentation – players see outcomes, not probabilities.

This is intentional. In the real world, you do not know the odds. You do not see the dice. You only see what happens.

When you negotiate with a lord, you do not know if he will agree. You only know what he says. When you march to battle, you do not know if you will win. You only know the result.

This determinism creates tension, immersion, and consequence. Every choice matters because you cannot see the math behind it. You must act on information, not probabilities.

D.7 THE SILENCE OF THE MECHANICS

The mechanics are silent. They exist, but they are not seen. Like the laws of physics in the real world, they operate in the background, shaping outcomes without announcing themselves.

This silence serves three purposes:

Immersion: Players experience the world, not the rules

Tension: Not knowing the odds creates genuine uncertainty

Trust: Players trust that the system is fair because they cannot manipulate it

When a player succeeds, they feel they earned it. When they fail, they feel it was deserved. The silence ensures that credit and blame go to the choices, not the dice.

D.8 THE LIVING WORLD AS ANTAGONIST

In many games, the antagonist is a specific villain – the Dark Lord, the Evil Empire, the Big Bad. In this world, the antagonist is the world itself.

The cold is an antagonist. Hunger is an antagonist. Time is an antagonist.

Distance is an antagonist. The ambitions of other lords are antagonists. The weight of history is an antagonist.

The player does not fight against a single enemy. They fight against entropy, against scarcity, against the grinding reality of a world that does not care about them.

This is not nihilism. It is realism. And when the player overcomes these obstacles – when they survive the winter, when they feed their army, when they outlast their enemies – the victory is genuine.

D.9 THE OATH AS CORE METAPHOR

The game is called Age of Shattered Oaths for a reason. Oaths are the glue that holds society together. They are also the first thing to break.

A lord swears fealty to a king – then betrays him.
A knight swears to protect the weak – then preys on them.
A husband swears to love his wife – then takes a lover.
A father swears to provide for his children – then drinks away the grain money.

Every oath broken creates a crack in the world. Enough cracks, and the whole thing shatters.

The player will make oaths. They will break them, or they will keep them. Either way, the world will remember. The ledger will record. The ancestors will watch.

An oath kept is a small victory against entropy.
An oath broken is another crack in the world.

D.10 THE DESIGNER'S RESPONSIBILITY

A system this detailed carries responsibility. Every rule affects how players experience the world. Every table shapes what is possible. Every number determines what matters.

The designer's responsibility is to:

Be clear: Rules must be unambiguous

Be complete: No missing steps, no gaps to fill

Be consistent: No contradictions, no surprises

Be fair: The same rules apply to everyone

Be silent: Let the mechanics fade into the background

The goal is not to create a game that is "fun" in the traditional sense. The goal is to create a world that is real. Fun will emerge from that reality – the fun of survival, of achievement, of story.

D.11 FINAL WORD

This is the Age of Shattered Oaths. The old king is dead. The eight crowns are scattered. The throne sits empty.

You are not the chosen one. You are not the hero of prophecy. You are a person in a world of people, trying to make your way through the chaos.

You will swear oaths. You may break them. You will make allies. You may lose them. You will build. You may see it all burn.

But the ledger will remember. The world will remember. And when you finally lay down your banner, your story will be recorded in the Hall of Legends.

Ride wisely. Write your name in the chronicles of this broken world.

Learns new information about a house

7.3 Cross-Region Tracking

If a house has interests in multiple regions (e.g., marriage alliances), it appears in all relevant regional ledgers with cross-reference notes.

SECTION 8: REGIONAL RELATIONSHIP MATRIX

For quick reference, system maintains a regional relationship matrix:

text

REGIONAL RELATIONSHIP MATRIX

text

IMPORTANT

This system is OPTIONAL.

The default Age of Shattered Oaths has NO MAGIC.

No spells. No wizards. No necromancers.

Only steel, oaths, and the will of men.

If you choose the Necromancer Lord, you are the EXCEPTION.

You are the ONLY magic that exists.

The world has no context for you.

You are alone in your power.

Choose wisely.
